Carmel celebrates Christmas season

THE ANNUAL Carmel community Christmas celebration was held at Sunset Center last Saturday afternoon. After the sing-along, holiday sweets and hot cider were served on the patio. During the refreshment time Santa Claus (above) passed

Support Howard Brunn

Dear Editor:

Thank you for the fine feature story on Howard Brunn which appeared Thanksgiving Eve. The news that he is seriously considering a race for fifth district supervisor gives hope to thoughtful residents that honor and dignity may yet be restored to that important office.

This writer has worked closely with Howard Brunn and I can think of no one more qualified to represent and serve the good people of this district. Space does not permit a list of all of his contributions and achievements, yet it is worth mentioning that he has been in the vanguard of preserving our environment for as long as one can remember.

While our present supervisor was busy lunching with slick, outside, special-interest corporate characters, Howard was busy donating his time, quiet intelligence and considerable political experience to worthy causes dear to the hearts of all locals.

Often this took the form of vigorous grassroots community organizing to clean up or turn back many of the horrors perpetrated by our present supervisor. Over-development of Carmel Valley — the courageous and on-going fight to save Del Monte Forest from the chain-saw massacre cooked up by Supervisor Peters and friends, are but small sampling.

This community clearly has an opportunity to return the compliment to Howard Brunn for his life-long commitment to this area's well being and I urge all of his friends to wholeheartedly encourage his official candidacy, and work hard on his behalf.

Life and living

Dear Editor:

One is born and after so many years, dies. One's years vary. Some die at birth without living; some die at 80 without living; some die at an early age but live much. But what is living? I know many great minds have answered this question. This that I write now is my view of living.

There are a few of us, in our lifetime, that want to become famous so that they may live forever. However, for most of us just trying to do things with the time we have on earth is an art or a chore.

When I was a young girl living on our farm, I always dreamed of becoming a dancer or an actress. Both dreams fell to the side of the road. Circumstances of the depression helped me change my mind. Perhaps it was all for the best as I doubt that I would be another Pavlova or a Sarah Bernhardt.

In high school, I was very good in dramatics and art. I was aware of the people and things around me. Because I liked my classmates and teachers and gave of myself to them, I became popular. I realized at that young age how important giving of one's self is. This, I felt, was being alive and living.

I was impressed by many people. I remember one young girl elevator operator who would say "going up" with a rise to her voice; and always with a smile. I thought she was the best elevator operator I had ever seen and told her so.

Then there was this girl in the cannery where I worked for a short time, who would put the fruit in the cans with a rhythm to music; and she was the fastest canner in the cannery. I was also very proud of my brother (who at one time was a fine symphony conductor), planted cotton and got four bales to an acre.

I have met many talented people in my life who never became "famous" but were famous to me. I became in love with people (that's a story in itself) in all walks of life and I can say my greatest enjoyment came from them. Though to my sorrow, some of the greatest disappointments, too.

In my youth I did many small jobs. No matter how small the job was, I did my best and saw to it to be "tops."

Finally, after doing hostess work, being a seamstress, and an inspector in a dress factory, I became a salesperson. This I enjoy doing. I love fine apparel and people. Many of my clients became my lifelong friends. I have waited on so-called "famous," the very rich, and various types. They were all a challenge to me. I would give all and in giving I had this wonderful feeling of satisfaction that I did my job well, and I knew it.

I am past 70 years now. I feel very young at heart and very much alive. I have a lot more living to do. Today I work in a fine apparel store part-time, do sewing, painting, my own housework and gardening, the best way I know how, and help my fellow man.

I find this is living. I feel so fortunate to have my brothers and sister with their families near me, and also surrounded with the beauty of heaven on earth Carmel-by-the-Sea, where life is worth living.

Let's control tourists

Dear Editor:

Tourists!

There's madness in the streets. Sidewalks chockablock with aimless saunterers, crosswalks filled with amblers, residents rudely gutterized.

What's the cure? In coming weeks, SCAAT will propose various medicines to mitigate the tourist plague.

SCAAT recognizes that Sensitive Citizens Are Anti-Tourist, and invites all of such persuasion to join. There are no dues, just a devotion to the principle of tourist control.

Let's clear the air. Carmel visitors come in two categories. House guests and motel lodgers are guests of the community. Basically well-mannered, well-dressed spenders, they contribute to the economy without despoiling the aura. They are welcome.

The day visitor and the bussed-in visitor is a horse of a different color. He clutters our streets in droves, buys gimcracks only, contributes nothing. He's a tourist!

Can we make Carmel less palatable for the likes of him? We can. As one small example, an ordinance — with suitable fine attached — against the lapping of ice cream cones on public streets. That'll spoil his fun!

All SCAAT-minded residents are invited to submit ideas for tourist alleviation. Ideas! That's what's needed. If you truly yearn for a lessening of tourist pressure, put your best ideas in a letter to the Pine Cone editor. That's all that's required for membership in SCAAT.

'Disappointed' with Carmel

Dear Editor:

The Pine Inn has long maintained a beautiful memory from our first trip more than 20 years ago. I anticipated the return. On arrival, I parked in front of the hotel, three-fourths in the loading zone, one-fourth in the red zone, and went in to register, leaving my trunk up.

A bell boy brought in my luggage and put the trunk top down, and when I had finished registering, the gentleman at the desk gave a parking pass which he stated was around the block at the back of the hotel.

I went out to change my car and I had already received a ticket. Not one, but two, as I was in each zone! The $14 is not that im-

Rejection of Del Monte Forest plan doesn't come as surprise

By ROBERT MISKIMON

IT'S SOMEWHAT ironic that the Coastal Commission has rejected the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program and referred the document back to Monterey County for further revisions.

What's ironic is that some of the criticisms of the coastal plan voiced by state officials echo those of a former Monterey County staff planner who had a well-publicized clash with Supervisors Michael Moore and William Peters.

The two primary issues cited by the Coastal Commission where more work needs to be done on the LCP to bring it into compliance with state requirements concern public access and protection of natural resources in Del Monte Forest.

Almost one year ago, Susan Hilinski — a Monterey County staff planner who worked on the Del Monte Forest plan — criticized the draft LCP drawn up by the two supervisors for much the same reasons. Supervisors Moore and Peters had taken over writing of the plan after the Monterey County Planning Commission reached an impasse on some critical issues.

Ms. Hilinski stressed that the Del Monte Forest LCP needed to provide more protection for environmentally sensitive habitats and to insure more public access to points within the Forest. Subsequently, the board of supervisors modified the LCP to reflect lower development density.

But apparently the Coastal Commission agrees with some of the same criticisms expressed almost a year ago by Ms. Hilinski. Supervisors Moore and Peters, on the other hand, maintain that the language of the plan is sufficient to provide the degree of public access and environmental protection the state requires.

Supervisor Peters has even expressed some regret that he and Supervisor Moore took over the writing of the plan, and thereby triggered many months of public criticism and protest over their involvement.

One wonders what kind of document would have been produced by Monterey County if alert and concerned citizens had not closely monitored the development of this plan, and had not voiced their objections. It seems that a handful of aware, thoughtful citizens — and one particularly insightful county staff planner — are responsible for forcing modifications in the LCP which would make it more acceptable to the Coastal Commission.

And the Coastal Commission has upheld its responsibility carefully to evaluate the final shape of the plan before it can be certified and incorporated into Monterey County planning policies. Somehow, the system seems to have worked rather well, despite some rather dark and dubious moments along the way. Citizen involvement and public pressure for the right kind of plan, developed in the full light of day, has been crucial to this accomplishment.

portant and I have paid it, but the rudeness of the man at the desk in not instructing all bell boys to leave trunks up so that police ticketing cars would understand, all leaves me at a loss.

I guess tourists, who actually make up the economy of the village will not return if treated in this impersonal, unfriendly manner.

A disappointed tourist.

Take charge, trustees!

Board of Trustees
Carmel Unified School District
Dear Board Members:

We are all human, and sometimes our boards of elected officials — who were elected to represent the people in their districts — fall into the very bad habit of taking the easiest and most pleasant course for themselves. This is to sit back, and after a few perfunctory questions, for the sake of appearances, put their stamp of approval on whatever is proposed to them by the paid staff and bureaucracy they were elected to give guidance and directions to. Thus the voice of the people is quietly smothered, or ignored, democracy fails, and we find ourselves being ruled by the entrenched establishment.

The board of our Carmel Unified School District gives some signs that they, too, are not immune to this all-too-human failing.

The fine teachers and staff of our Carmel Middle School, for example, tell us that in the matter of curriculum — the question of whether or not we are to have a full year of science, or an adequate history course, for example — they look to the school board for guidance and direction.

"It's up the school board," they tell us. "We're waiting to hear from the school board." And then, when the school board is approached, we are told that the teachers don't want this or that, or the administration doesn't recommend it. Or we are told: "We don't have a teacher for science. We don't have enough money."

Thus we drift from year to year, and our curriculum suffers more and more in comparison to that of other districts, many of them smaller and less wealthy than we are.

Perhaps our various elected boards should periodically and regularly take a good, close, honest look at themselves. Perhaps they should ask themselves: "What is expected of us? What were we elected for? What are our responsibilities and duties? Are we free to abdicate them? Who decides whether we are to have a year of science or history in our schools? Are we in charge here?"

Yes, dear board members. You are in charge. Please, you who sought to lead us, who solicited our votes, you are in charge.

County officials must grapple with revisions in Del Monte Forest plan

By JOE LIVERNOIS

MONTEREY COUNTY officials hope to get the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal program conditionally certified when the plan returns to the Coastal Commission in February.

The commission rejected the plan last week and sent it back to Monterey County for revisions which will provide more public access and greater protection of natural habitat areas.

The board of supervisors must now determine how to modify the plan to meet Coastal Act guidelines. It can either accept modifications submitted by the Coastal Commission staff or negotiate changes with the Coastal Commission.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley said after the meeting that modifications to the plan will not be difficult to accomplish. He said he was pleased with the tone of the Coastal Commission at the Dec. 2 meeting in San Francisco.

"What was very interesting about the meeting was there was no substantive debate about densities," Supervisor Peters said.

"It's reassuring that the Coastal Commission is designed to look at all conformities and not a single commissioner raised the point of densities at all."

Critics of the plan said they felt the residential density allowed in the plan would degrade the forest environment.

"They will literally destroy the forest with this plan," Anne Holliday, president of Friends of the Grove, told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

But commissioners allowed the densities,

DEVELOPMENT densities in the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program — including plans for a 270-unit hotel at Spanish Bay (above) — are acceptable to the Coastal Commission. But the commission rejected the Monterey County-prepared plan and returned it for more protection of environmentally-sensitive habitats and greater public access. The LCP is expected to be considered again by the Coastal Commission in February. (Michael Gardner photo).

The commission all but exonerated Peters and his fellow Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore on charges by critics that the public was excluded from the revision process.

which were a major bone of contention along every step of the draft plan stages, without comment.

Peters said the Coastal Commission failure to address the proposed densities "gives us a clear assessment" of commission support for the densities.

The plan would allow 1,226 new homes and condominiums, a 270-room hotel and two golf courses.

Bob Grace, vice president for real estate of the Pebble Beach Co., said the commission "implied" that Pebble Beach Co. officials have been "good stewards" of the Del Monte Forest area and that "it's time we get on with more substantive issues. I think we've shown a responsibility in the past in doing a good job preserving the beauty of the area."

The Pebble Beach Co. is the major landowner in the unincorporated Del Monte Forest.

The commission all but exonerated Peters and his fellow Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore on charges by critics that the public was excluded from the revision process.

MOORE AND PETERS prepared the revised document after the county planning commission failed to reach agreement on a recommendation to supervisors for the Del Monte Forest LCP.

Ms. Holliday requested a grand jury investigation into a "possible perversion of the legal process" by Peters and Moore and their Del Monte Forest LCP revision.

She suggested the two were unduly influenced by a Pebble Beach Co. consultant in preparation of the plan and "totally circumvented" the public process.

Charges that officials bypassed the public in preparation of local coastal plans on the county level are not new to the Coastal Commission.

Commissioners told Moore and Peters last week the public may have been suspicious of supervisors' actions because of their attempts to save time.

Peters admitted last week that he would have "done it different" if he had known it would arouse such suspicion.

If Moore, Peters and the county were lax in their revisions, it was in the areas of public access and the protection of natural habitat areas, Coastal Commissioners agreed.

Commissioners said they want the plan modified to include more access to beaches, trails and underwater areas — for scuba divers — than the LCP now allows.

Last February, then-Monterey County staff planner Susan Hilinski told supervisors the plan fell short of Coastal Act requirements for resource protection and public access.

But Ray Lamb, assistant planning director, said the plan submitted to the Coastal Commission last week was "somewhat different than the plan reviewed by Hilinski."

Lamb said the LCP was revised in April and in July after about a half-dozen public hearings before the board of supervisors. "It's a different time and a different plan," he said.

The Del Monte Forest LCP developed by the county planning staff and a citizen's advisory committee was presented to the Monterey County Planning Commission in 1980 and reviewed in a public hearing.

The planning commission was split in its final recommendation to the board of supervisors. The board then named Moore and Peters as a special committee to make revisions to the coastal plan.

SUPERVISORS Moore and Peters presented the revised draft to the board in January, which prompted Ms. Hilinski's comments. The revised plan "doesn't provide adequate open space and recreational opportunities for the general public," she reported. "The supervisors' version has a lower standard of resource protection than the other LCP segments of Monterey County."

Since her critique, the plan was revised twice to reflect lower development densities, but still does not meet Coastal Act guidelines, commissioners told county officials last week.

In fact, the LCP submitted to the commission could have reduced public access areas off 17 Mile Drive because of concerns about erosion of natural areas along the coastline.

Changes which would have remedied the inadequacies were submitted to the commission by its staff last week. The commission could have conditionally certified the plan with those changes last week, but it chose instead to let Monterey County officials make revisions.

Under Coastal Commission regulations, counties have 30 days to respond to a conditionally certified plan, said Diane Landry, coastal planner. The commission offered Monterey County a time waiver, but Supervisor Peters was "reluctant" to accept the waiver.

Revised water demand figures to be presented

REVISED WATER demand projections may give Monterey Peninsula Water Management District directors a direction for water supply planning.

The range of population growth possibilities by the year 2020 will be presented district directors at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 13 in Monterey City Hall.

Consultant Richard Recht is to present a range of growth possibilities in terms of high and low growth limits expected on the Monterey Peninsula.

Recht discovered earlier this year that ever-changing economic and planning conditions can make specific estimates worthless, he told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

Two years ago, Recht predicted water demand would reach 33,400 ac. ft. on the peninsula by the year 2020. Water capacity is now about 20,000 ac. ft.

But Recht reported three months ago that the economic downturn and planning changes have reduced the potential for such growth and demand is now expected to reach only 25,806 ac. ft. per year by the year 2020.

After he submitted his updated report, Recht was asked by district directors to "document his finding with a range of possible population increases," according to Bruce Buel, district director.

Recht said he is "visiting" each of the cities within the district to review planning policies and the economic climate.

While he has not yet developed his findings, he said he is certain the fate of Monterey II, a development proposed for the east side of Monterey, will make an "overwhelming" difference in the planning range.

He said he has also found that "the high and low limits are so far apart that a middle is hard to come to. Any compromise would not arrive at either of the extremes.

"It dumps the problem (of planning to meet future needs) back to the water management board, which is probably where it should be," Recht said.

When Recht made his original projections in 1980, he assumed Monterey II would be built and that Carmel Valley would develop. Since then, however, general plan amendments, a sluggish local economy and other factors have slowed growth.

Recht then estimated the district will use about 6,000 ac. ft. per year less than anticipated by the year 2020. There are 325,851 gallons per acre foot of water.

The board of directors has authorized initial work toward preparation of an environmental impact report for a proposed dam on the upper Carmel River with a 29,000 ac. ft. storage capacity.

A proposed three-pronged water project would also include storage of additional water underground in Seaside, and a water conservation program.

Cost of the program is estimated as $80 million.

The board of directors is also scheduled to set a new date for a protest hearing on a proposed Carmel River management program.

The hearing was originally held Oct. 11 and Buel said 65 protest claims were submitted. If more than 50 percent of the land owners with more than 50 percent of the total assessed valuation of property within the proposed zone protest the project it will die without an election.

If not, the board plans to place the program on a mail ballot to property owners and residents within the zone in January.

Buel said 415 property owners hold property within the proposed zone.

The protest hearing had been postponed until Dec. 6, but Buel said the board "was not ready to hear it" on that date.

CV air pollution device detects some increases

A JUST-INSTALLED air pollution monitor in Carmel Valley already has justified its existence, in the view of Earl Moser, longtime environmentalist and former member of the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District Board of Directors.

The air pollution monitoring station was placed in the Valley in late October, six months after air monitoring equipment was removed from the Mid-Carmel Valley Shopping Center.

The air pollution control district removed the equipment from the shopping center because that location could not provide temperature and humidity controls necessary for accurate readings.

Air monitoring equipment was re-installed in a small shed behind Tularcitos Elementary School in Carmel Valley from a location in Scotts Valley, in Santa Cruz County.

On Nov. 13, fairly high readings of pollutants in Carmel Valley air were measured, according to Moser, who receives monthly print-outs from the monitoring station provided by the district.

"On Nov. 13, there were two hours when the reading was .08 parts per million (ppm) of ozone," Moser told the Pine Cone/Outlook. He explained that .10 ppm of oxidants in the atmosphere is considered a "critical point" by state standards.

At that level of air pollution, there is possible damage to plants and eye irritation, Moser indicated.

"On the same day (Nov. 13), there was another hour when the reading was .07 ppm and three hours of .06 ppm," Moser said. "When it gets to that level, I begin to get nervous."

"I've been checking these readings for 16 years, and for the past three years, we've had comparatively clean air in the Valley because the inversion layer has been higher than the top of the hills," Moser said.

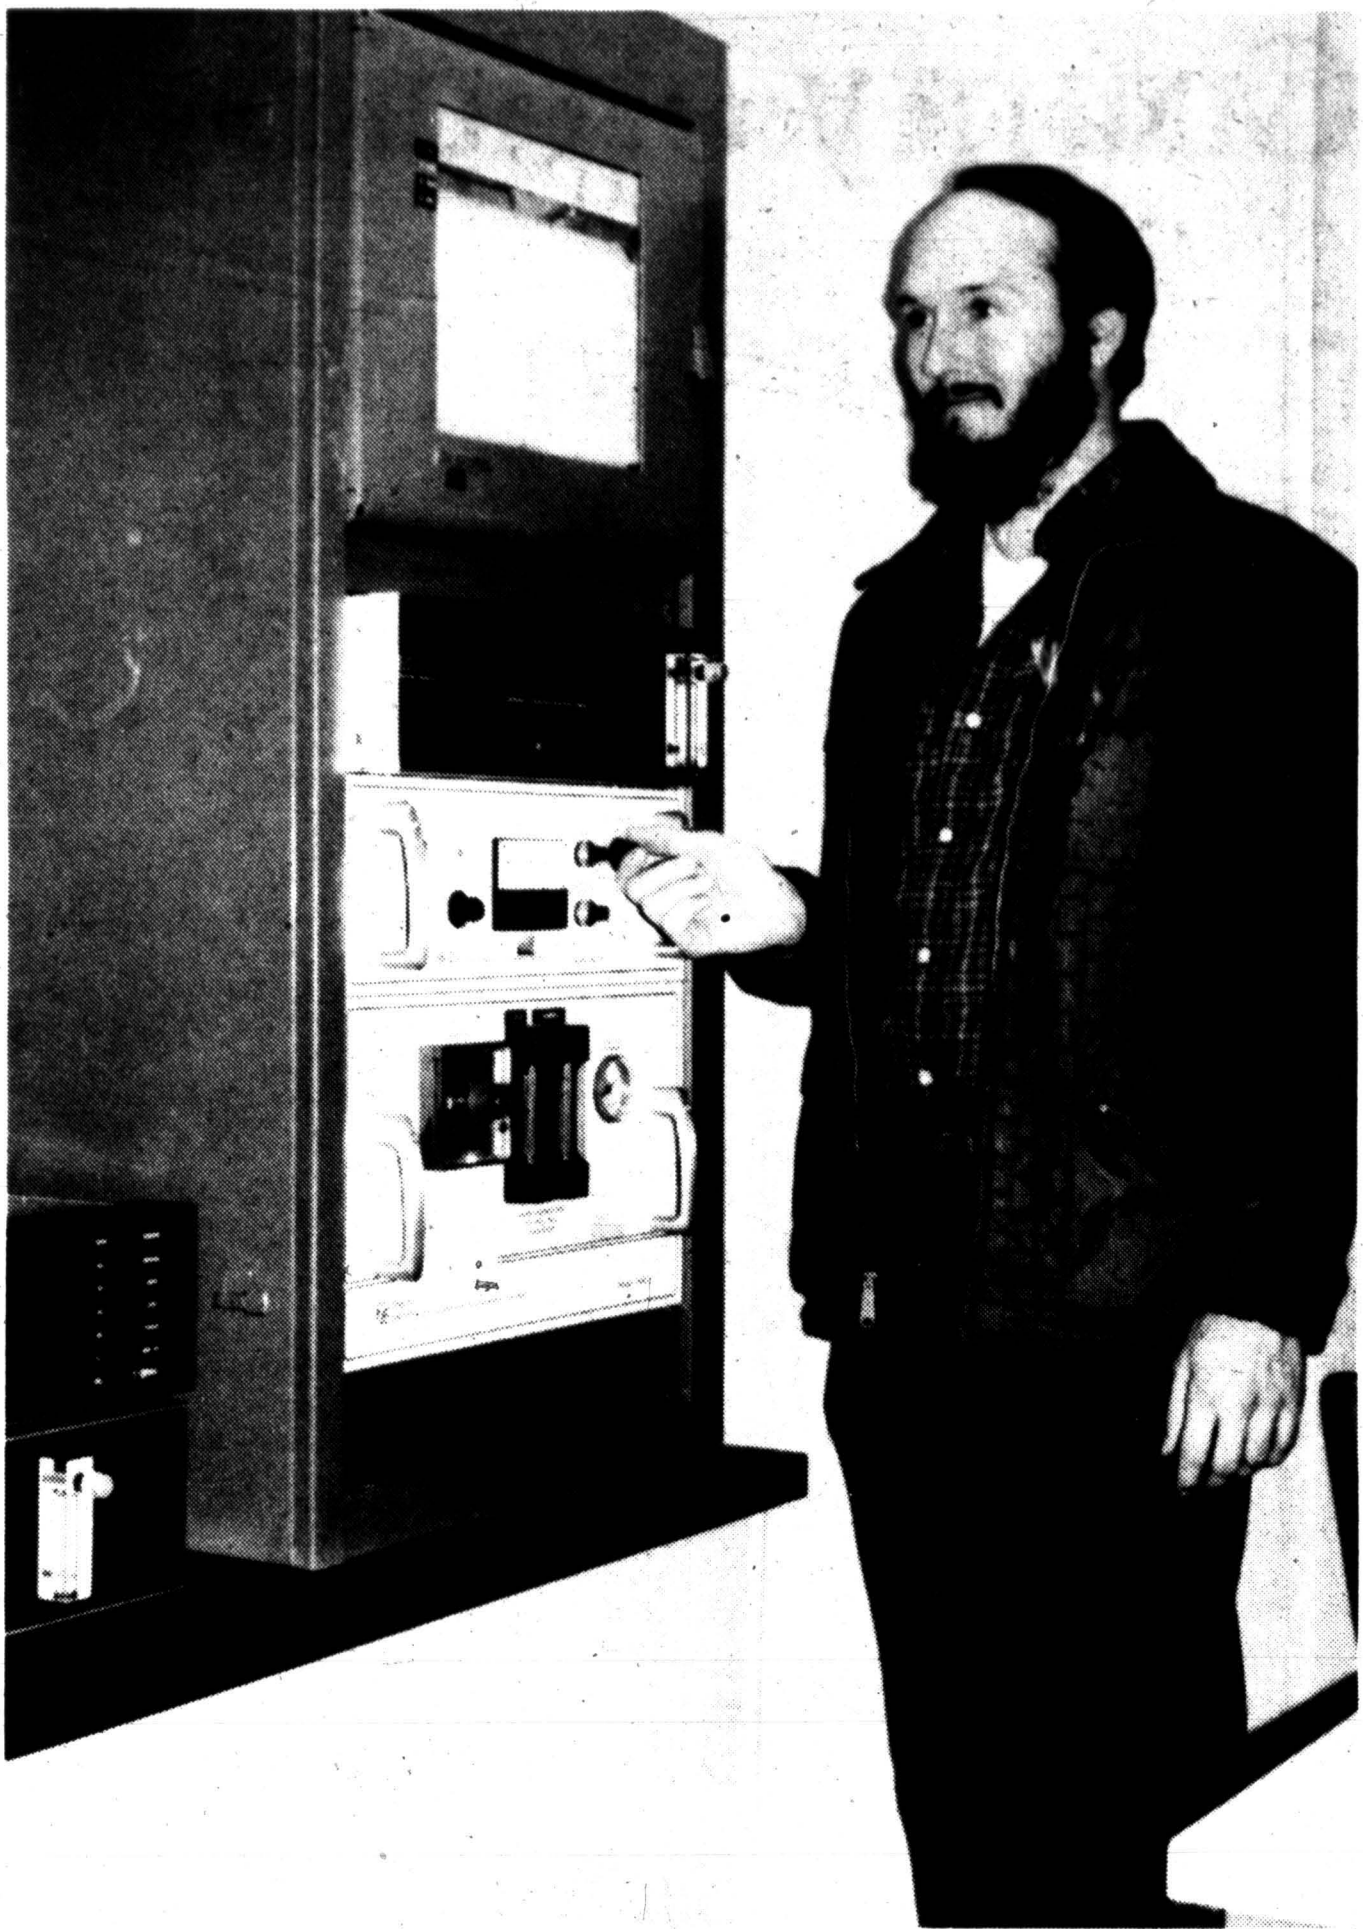

"But when the traffic increases, you can see more hydrocarbons going into the atmosphere. In my opinion, this is the beginning of worry."

Air pollution control officials were less disturbed about the readings, however, than was Moser.

Walt McDonnell, air pollution specialist, takes air quality readings on the $16,000 worth of automated equipment twice weekly, and takes those readings to district headquarters in Salinas for evaluation.

McDonnell said pollution readings generally are very low in Carmel Valley, but usually are slightly higher during autumn months. He pointed out that none of the recent readings has exceeded state pollution alert standards.

"The hotter the day with no air movement, the higher the readings," McDonnell said. "On Nov. 22, for example, the highest hourly average reading was .04 ppm, which is well below the state standard."

WALT MCDONNELL, air pollution specialist with the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District, checked pollution readings on equipment recently re-installed in Carmel Valley. The electronic measuring devices are housed in a shed behind Tularcitos Elementary School.

Holiday programs for children at the library

Carmel-area children will have the opportunity this month to decorate cookies and trees, participate in puppet shows and see a full-length Walt Disney movie — all for free.

A series of holiday programs is underway in the children's department of Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library, northeast corner of Lincoln Street and Ocean Avenue.

For pre-school youngsters ages two to three, there will be stories, songs and crafts at 10 a.m. and again at 11 a.m. Dec. 9, 16 and 23. The same activities will be offered at 10 a.m. only Dec. 15 and 22. The Christmas tree will be decorated during the Dec. 9 party and a special feature at the Dec. 22-23 activities will be cookie decorating.

There are two other special programs for children. A holiday puppet show will be performed at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Dec. 18.

For more information, contact Ms. Geroy.

Carmel youngster launches his own newspaper

By JOE LIVERNOIS

All the good news that fits, Lu Spirit prints.

Inspired by Lou Grant and embracing a philosophy that only good news is worthy of print, 12-year old Lu Spirit of Carmel published his first weekly Carmel newspaper, The San Antonio Seashell Nov. 27.

Spirit is publisher, advertising manager, reporter, illustrator and paperboy for the Seashell, which he delivered to 10 charter subscribers in Carmel in its first week.

His newspaper, which sells for 50 cents an issue, hits the pavement on Saturdays and is packed with good news.

"I will never print bad news," he said. "I hate bad news. I don't like it when some woman comes on television and stares at you and tells you there's been a murder in San Jose."

To practice what he preaches, Spirit's first major story was the Carmel Sunset Center's photo exhibit which featured John Galante's works.

"I will print important news, though," he said. "This week I have a story about the big storm."

Important news reports in his first edition included the big story out of Carmel City Hall that more than 100 applications have been sent for the soon-to-be-vacated city administrator's post.

But his first big "scoop" came out of his advertising work: he was able to get an ad from Kim's Gym at $4 for four weeks.

"Everyone said, 'Wow, you got an ad from Kim Novak!'" Spirit told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week. "They said Kim Novak doesn't talk much to the media."

The advertisement is a testimonial written by Spirit's mother, Bonnie, who works out with Novak and her aerobics class. "This reporter is here to tell you that the results are fantastic," said the ad. "I've lost inches. I can bend without aches and pains."

Spirit, a seventh grader at Carmel Middle School, said he was inspired to publish his own newspaper because he watched Lou Grant "a lot" on television.

"I really wasn't interested in newspapers until then," he said.

Spirit said he wanders around Carmel "picking up information" to use in the Seashell during the early part of the week and sits down to write his stories on Thursdays and Fridays.

Each edition will feature his own art work on the front page and an "entertainment" page in back.

A column which features his own "humorous (but true) wise words" will also be included weekly. In the first edition, those wise words included, "Heartburn is a justice of the pizza," and "In professional sports, it's not whether they win or lose, it's how many pay to see the game."

'I will never print bad news,' he said. 'I hate bad news. I don't like it when some woman comes on television and stares at you and tells you there's been a murder in San Jose.'

His mother types the stories and the paper is published on a photocopy machine in time for delivery on Saturdays.

"I'd like to get the Seashell into a real newspaper," he said. "I don't want to get real big; it will never be as big as the Pine Cone. But I'd like to be able to get my own Xerox machine."

Spirit may be a young, idealistic newsman, but he is also aware that sound business practices can make or break any budding newspaper.

His advertisements are accepted on four-week contracts and he solicits long-term subscribers. "So far, I've made $50," he said. "But I've got to set some of that aside for Xeroxing."

His understanding of the news and business world is illustrated in his first "humorous (but true) wise words" column. "Money still talks these days," he wrote. "Trouble is, you have to increase the volume 87 percent."

LU SPIRIT, a 12-year old budding Carmel journalist, displayed the first edition of Carmel's most recent publication, The San Antonio Seashell. Spirit is publisher, reporter, advertising manager, artist and newsboy for the newspaper, which sells for 50 cents an issue and carries nothing but good news. (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

CV Ranch hearing Dec. 14

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors is to conduct a public hearing at 2:30 p.m., Dec. 14 on an appeal of a use permit for a 100-unit resort lodge at Carmel Valley Ranch.

The use permit was granted Oct. 27 by the Monterey County Planning Commission, but an appeal was filed by Carmel Valley attorney Richard Rosenthal.

Rosenthal contends the resort lodge is "contrary to the provisions of the moratorium" against new development in Carmel Valley until the 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan is revised and readopted.

The resort lodge would include a 100-seat capacity dining hall, a bar and lounge with seating for 80, and 1,050 sq. ft. of shops and meeting rooms to accommodate 300 persons.

Rosenthal asserts that no evidence exists "supporting the finding that the use permit will not be detrimental to the health, safety and general welfare of persons residing in the area."

He said both Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads are already at their safe traffic capacity and the resort would only aggravate traffic problems.

A $1 million reconstruction of the Carmel Valley-Robinson Canyon roads intersection is planned for construction but planning commissioners did not specify in the use permit that the intersection be completed before the lodge is occupied.

Carmel Valley Ranch developers indicated the project would increase traffic on Carmel Valley by 4.3 percent. They maintain the lodge will not be completed until mid-1984, while the intersection project is scheduled to be finished in October of 1983.

County planning staff requested updated traffic and geologic information on the area, but the planning commission turned down that request before it approved the use permit.

The Dec. 14 hearing before the board of supervisors will be held in the courthouse in Salinas.

Immediately after that hearing, a public hearing on an appeal by Gregory Lehman of Carmel Valley is scheduled.

Lehman filed an appeal based on Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon's use permit condition that an area between his guest house and his home be connected by a breezeway.

The condition was added to a use permit granted Lehman which allows a room Lehman recently added to his property to be used as a guest house.

Three years ago, Lehman obtained a building permit to add a garage with two rooms connected with a covered breezeway.

Del Monte Forest LCP

The commission then rejected the plan outright.

"Now it is up to the board what changes it would like to make," planner Ray Lamb said.

Ms. Holliday said she also felt the commission's action was a "real victory, because we can start raising issues again at the county level."

The issues may still be raised at the state level, Landry said.

She said persons who wish to submit written testimony about the Del Monte Forest Land Use Plan in time for consideration at the February Coastal Commission meeting should have it to her Santa Cruz office by Jan. 25.

Carmel school repairs may not be completed

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education has adopted a four-year, $269,720 program of school repairs with no assurances the funds will be available to complete the proposed work.

Work on projects listed first on a priority list prepared by the district administration is to begin "immediately," trustees decided Nov. 30.

Administrators had presented the board with a comprehensive proposal that outlined what kind of work is needed, when it should begin and how much it would cost to complete the repairs.

"They want us to begin the work immediately, but only spend the money that the district now has in hand," Supt. William Rand told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week. "If we receive more money from the state, Funds for the four-year program would come out of the deferred maintenance budget. The district has approximately $33,000 in that budget.

then we can move further down the priority list."

Funds for the four-year program would come out of the deferred maintenance budget. The district has approximately $33,000 in that budget.

The state will match deferred maintenance expenditures up to a maximum of $36,000, said business manager Robert Zampatti. The state matching grant program means that for every expenditure the district makes up to $36,000, the state will provide the same amount of money.

However, because of its own fiscal woes, the state may not be able to continue the matching grant program, Superintendent Rand said.

But hopeful trustees decided to approve the plan, which puts into effect the following maintenance schedule for Carmel schools through 1985-86:

- Captain Cooper School in Big Sur would have a water heater replaced in 1982-83 at a cost of $20,000.

- Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley would have a roof replaced ($5,900) and termite damage repaired ($1,010) in 1982-83. Carpets in ten rooms would be replaced ($10,000) in 1984-85. In 1985-86, the tennis courts would be resurfaced ($10,000).

- River School in Carmel would have a roof replaced in the third wing ($10,100) in 1982-83. In 1983-84, light fixtures would be replaced ($16,000). Carpets in six rooms would be replaced ($6,000) in 1984-85.

- Carmel Middle School in Carmel Valley would have carpets replaced, roofs repaired and lights replaced in 1982-83 for a $11,840 total cost.

IN 1983-84, corridors would be repaved ($27,360) and new carpets would be installed in six rooms ($6,010). The remaining corridors would be repaved in 1984-85 and in 1985-86 for a total cost of $60,000.

- Carmel High School needs an estimated $1.2 million in renovation work, according to an architect's report. District administrators have proposed that at least $85,500 be allocated over the next four years for needed repairs.

Replacement of the corridor in the main office and several storm drains ($9,500) and repair of a wall in the gym ($3,000) are scheduled for 1982-83.

All of the flat roofs would be replaced in 1983-84 for $30,000. In 1984-85 the attics would be insulated for $18,000. In 1985-86, a total of $25,000 would be spent on repairs to the swimming pool.

The maintenance report also included a separate proposed "rehabilitation" program that envisions the expenditure of an additional $1.1 million if funds are available from outside sources.

The district will seek funds from income from the sale or lease of district property and a grant from a special state budget established by passage of Prop. 1.

The district has used a portion of the $96,000 income from the lease of Carmel

TULARCITOS SCHOOL custodian Adolphus Cole last month spent several hours to repair the heating system at the school, which was out for four days. The Woods School for maintenance projects. Trustees may sell the property, currently valued at more than $1 million. If the property is sold, a portion of the income could be budgeted for the rehabilitation projects, Rand said.

Other income for rehabilitation projects may also be derived from the lease of Carmelo School and the eventual sale of three district-owned vacant sites in Carmel Valley, he added.

Prop. 1, passed by voters in November, authorizes the state to sell bonds to raise funds to help districts finance construction of new schools or to renovate buildings more than 40 years old. Trustees have applied for a grant to the California Department of Education.

projects. The proposed rehabilitation projects are:

- Captain Cooper School: repair driveway and pave the parking lot ($40,794).

- Bay School: Resurface driveway and parking lot ($6,448).

- Tularcitos School: Repair the school blacktop ($34,025).

- Carmel Middle School: resurface roadway and parking lots, abandon septic-tank system and hookup to the sanitary district, replace gym floor, replace sprinkler system and insulate attics for a total of $200,960.

- Carmel High School: replace locks and other hardware, replace several light fixtures, resurface corridors, resurface blacktop, repair gym, renovate the electrical and fire alarm systems, paint all exterior walls and repair buildings for a total of $840,000.

Recreation committee to meet in Carmel

ORGANIZATION WILL be the first order of business when a special committee to assess recreation needs in Carmel meets at 3:30 p.m. Dec. 10 at Carmel City Hall.

The city council-appointed committee will probably be divided into several smaller panels to explore different proposals for a community-wide recreation program, chairman Ken White said.

"I think it will basically be an organizational meeting where we find out who we are, when we want to meet on a regular basis and in which direction we are going," said White, who is also president of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

White said he will propose that several sub-committees be established to consider what kinds of activities to offer, where the programs could be held, costs of the proposals and whether a separate recreation commission should be established by the council.

"Of course, it's all up to the entire committee how we do this. I'm sure there will probably be ideas from the members for other committees. We'll just wait and see," he said.

White favors a joint school district-city recreation program.

"The district no doubt has the facilities but as you know we do not have sufficient money," White said. "The city may not have the facilities, but it may be able to help us out financially."

The committee also appears to favor a city-school district program, according to several members surveyed by the Pine Cone/Outlook.

"I would like to see a good use of the facilities. We have the facilities but we do not have the financial means to put on programs," said Dan Yurkovich, director of community services for the Carmel school district.

Yurkovich said renovation of the Carmel

High School swimming pool should be a top priority.

"I am envisioning putting a bubble over the swimming pool. The pool is already heated," he said. "That way everybody would be able to enjoy it all year. People could come up and use the pool. We (the district) could coordinate it and administer it."

DEVELOPMENT of two softball fields on the Carmel Middle School campus in Carmel Valley is also a possible project, he said.

"The city could help with some of the equipment and manpower to create a couple of softball fields at the middle school," Yurkovich suggested. "You could take the lights at Sunset Center (on the vacant lot) and put them over at the middle school."

Yurkovich pointed to Pacific Grove as evidence of the popularity of softball. "Pacific Grove has 43 slo-pitch softball teams and you can bet a lot of the players are from Carmel."

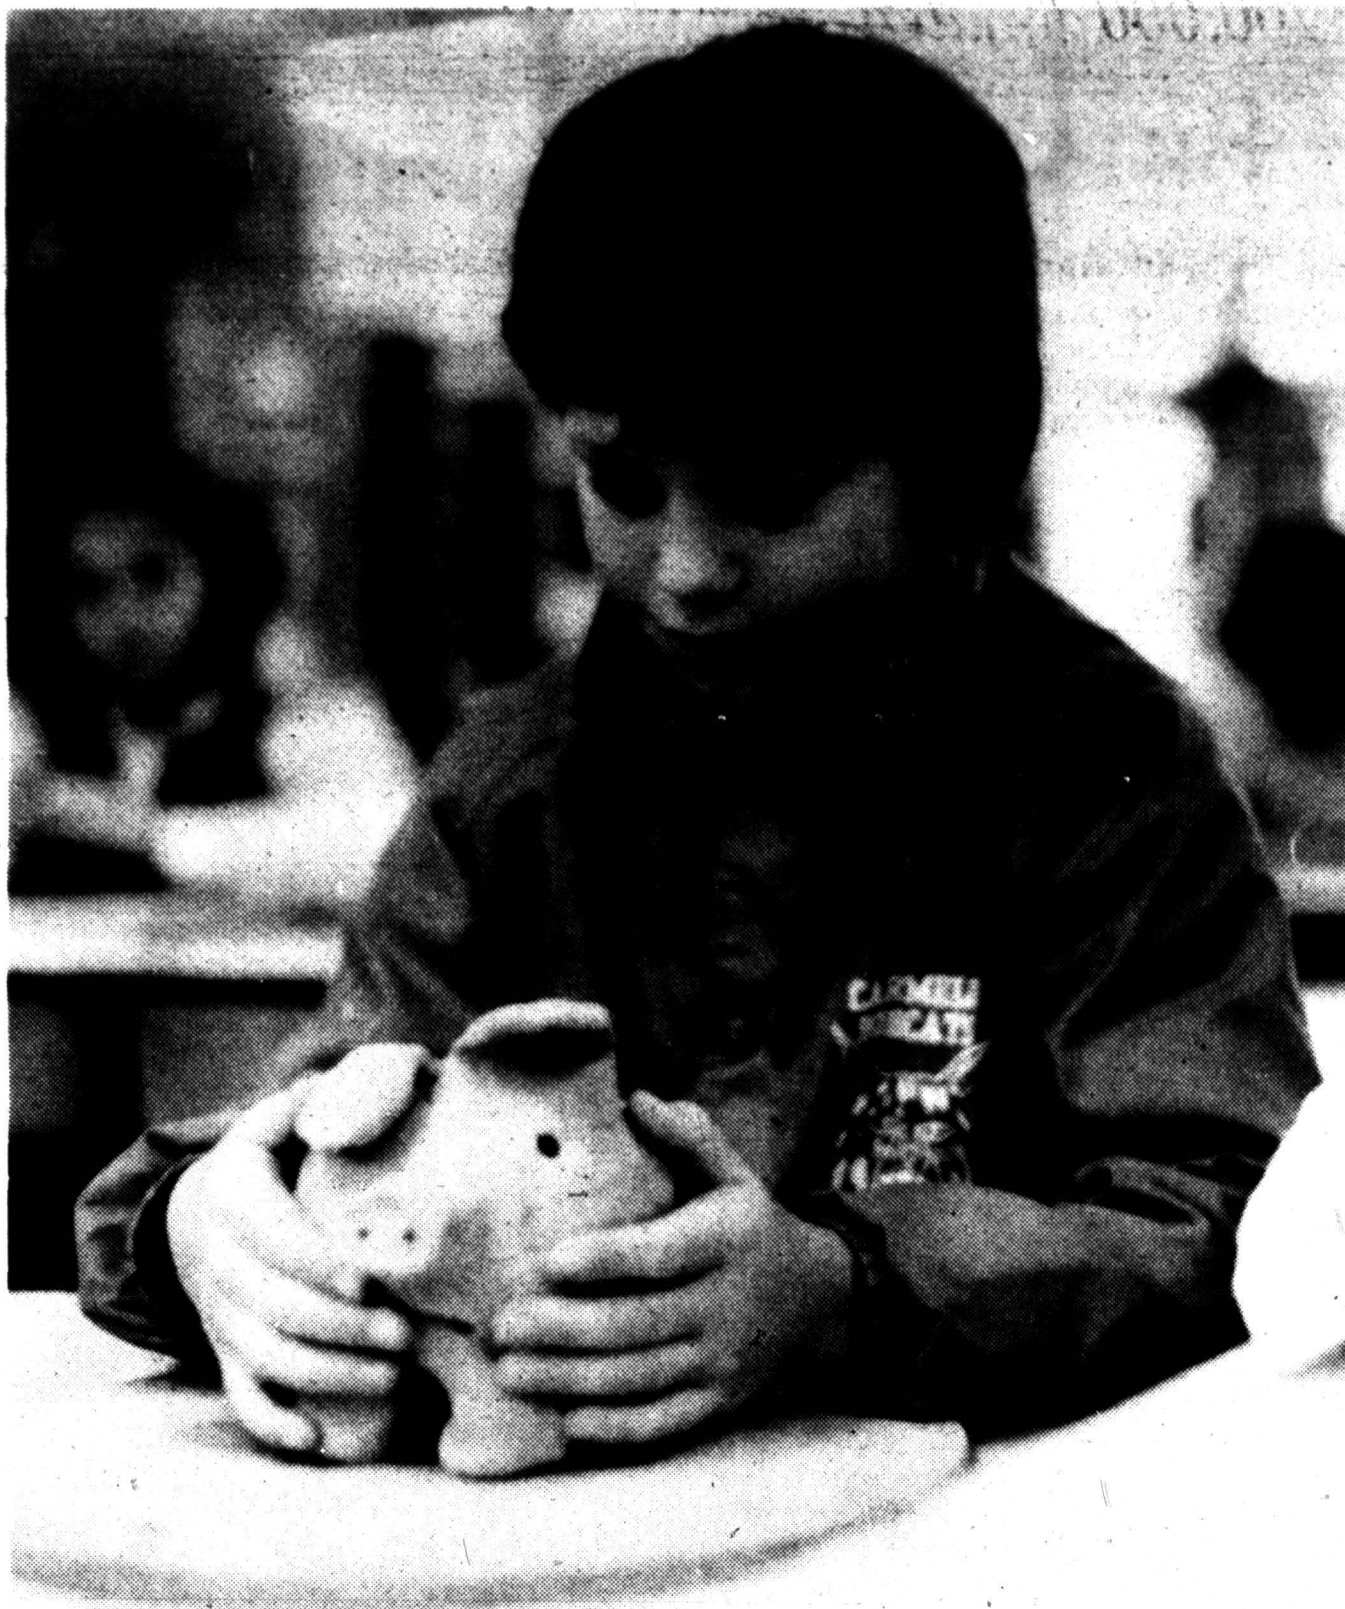

Classes for all ages, such as crafts, photography and exercise, could be offered as well, Yurkovich said.

Yurkovich admitted city officials may be concerned about contributing financially to a program that would also include non-city residents.

"I don't see that as a big problem. There are ways that can be worked out. They could have special cards for city residents and we could charge a small fee to others," he said.

Sunset Center offers many recreational and learning activities, but they are not enough, said director Richard Tyler.

"I think that the two major issues we have to approach are the very young people of Carmel and the needs of the senior citizens," he said. "There are two particular age groups that I think Carmel has to particularly respond to."

JOHN DAY, a third grader at Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley, worked patiently on his ceramic sculpture of a piggy bank. Although area schools offer a variety of recreational and artistic programs, officials recognize that there is a need for more activities for all ages. A special recreation committee will meet Dec. 10 to study the feasibility of a proposed joint city-school district recreation program. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Tyler favors a joint city-school district plan.

"I think it's a good idea. The school certainly has the space available. I think it would be a wonderful collaboration," Tyler added.

There would not be any conflicts between Sunset Center activities and those proposed in a new recreation program, Tyler believes.

"I don't see how there could be any problems. We'd certainly like to accommodate more activities here, which is what this is all about," he said.

Cultural Commissioner Roger Fremier also does not foresee any problems.

However, Fremier said he would like to see the council define the responsibilities of the cultural commission.

"My own personal concern is that the city should define the responsibilities we (commissioners) have in terms of recreation."

Fremier also believes that the recreation committee needs to keep a "broad focus."

"Part of my thinking is I'm more interested in the larger community. I think we should also work with cities like Monterey and Pacific Grove when it comes to any recreation programs," he added.

$200,000 donated anonymously

Barracuda Swim Team to expand its program

By MICHAEL GARDNER

AN ANONYMOUS donation of more than $200,000 to the Carmel Barracudas Swim Club will provide the seed money for an expanded community-wide program that eventually may include a covered swimming pool at Carmel High School.

A special committee of Barracuda parents, Carmel Unified School District administrators and city officials is scheduled to meet after the holidays to develop a swimming program proposal and budget plans.

"There is a real need for a pool that is available to the entire community," Richard Falge, a member of the Barracudas board of directors, told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

"We want to place an emphasis on a community-type facility that would be used on a year round basis," he said. "We would like to use this anonymous donation as seed money to start some kind of year-round program that would benefit the entire community, not just the Barracudas."

Falge said the committee will "begin work immediately" on a plan that could include provisions to cover the Carmel High School swimming pool.

The committee also needs to develop financing proposals because the $200,000 "is not enough" to renovate a pool, pay for maintenance and provide a comprehensive program beyond the first couple of years, Falge added.

The donation was made by a "resident of the Monterey Peninsula who loves kids."

'This is not just a Barracuda project or a school project. We want the entire community involved. Any program that we start will be open to the entire Carmel community,' he said.

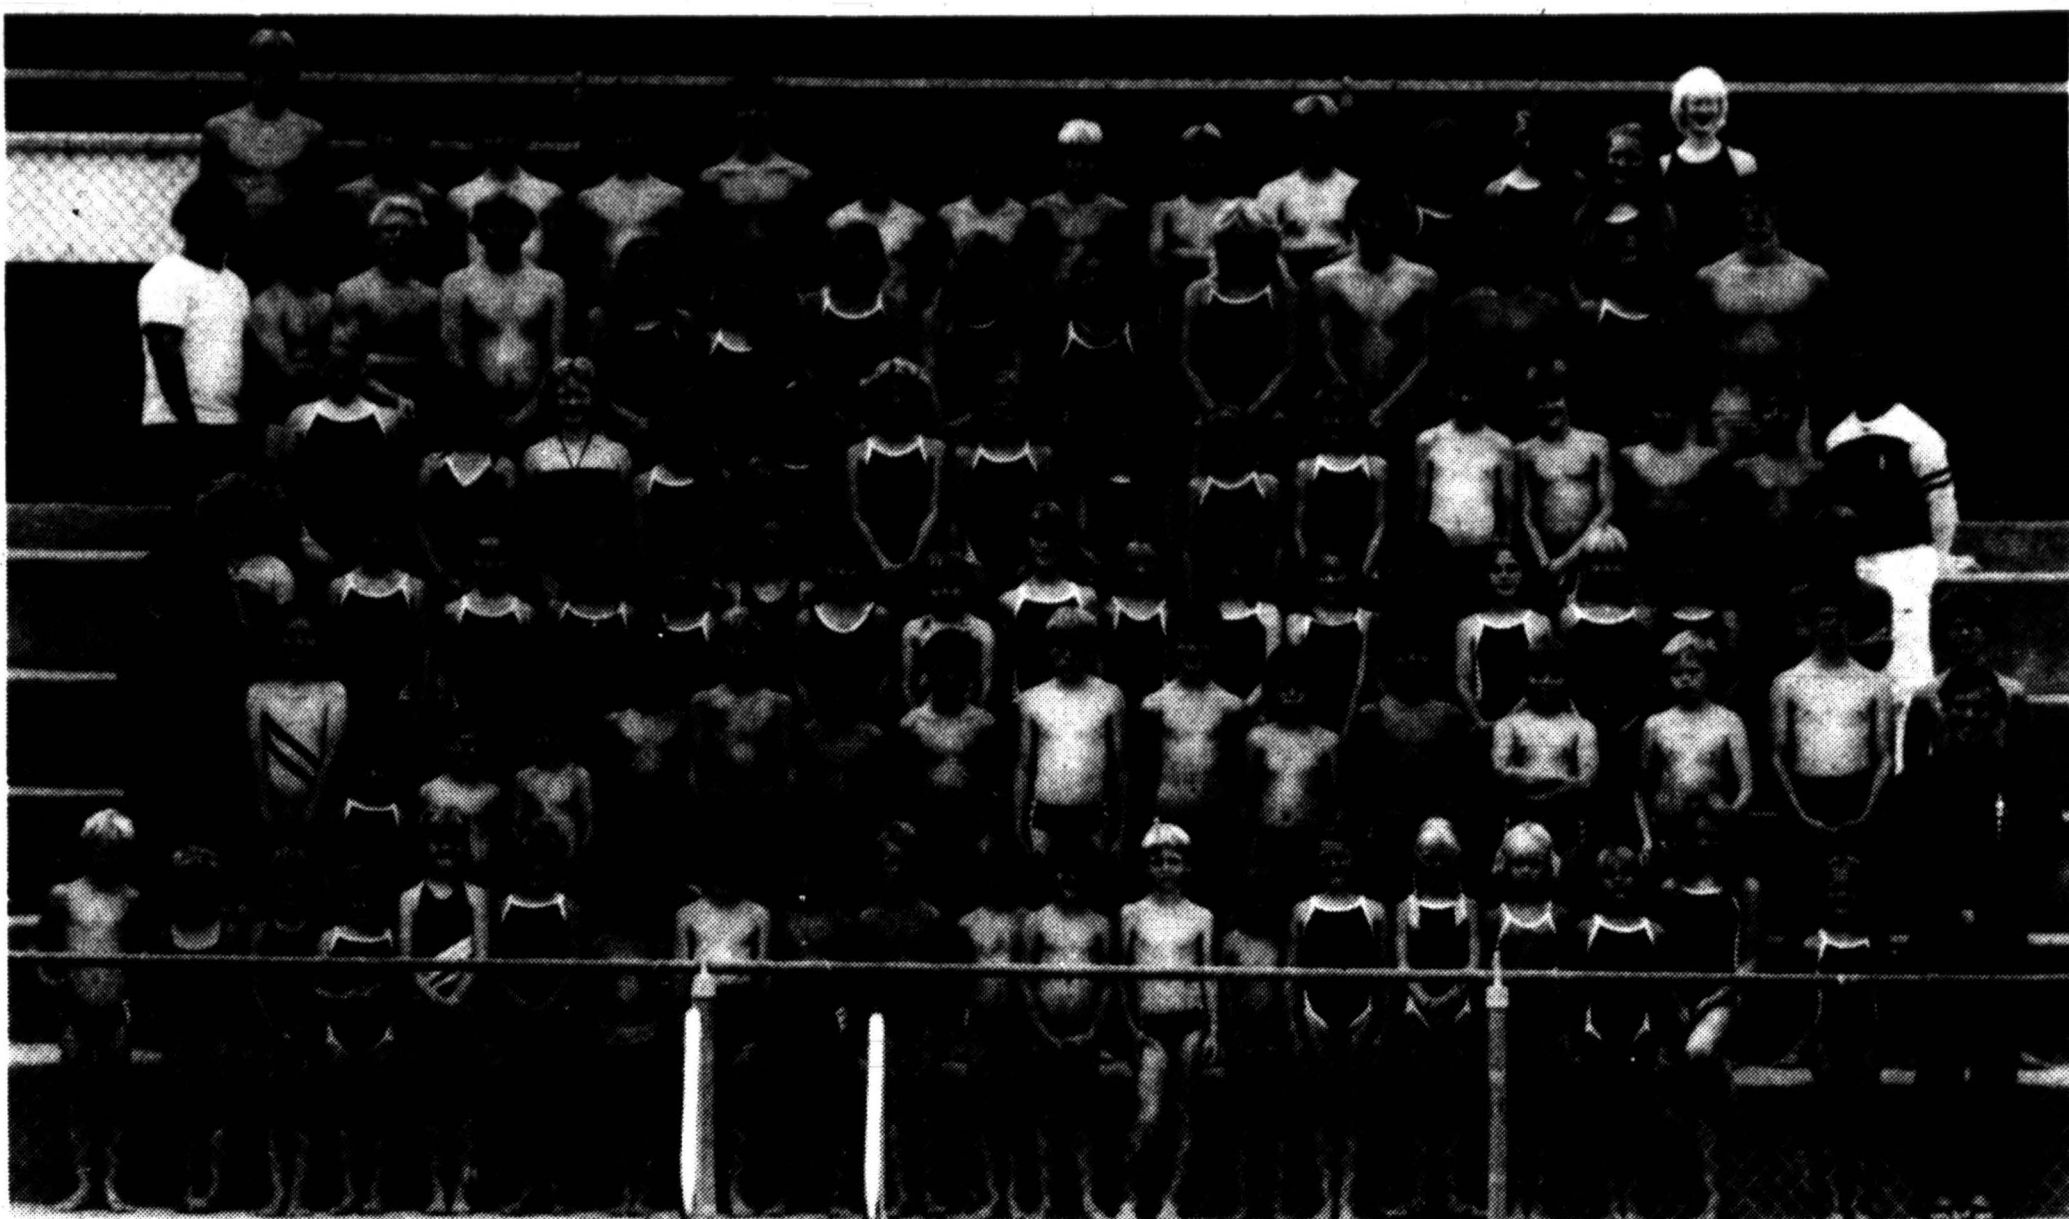

The donor prefers to remain anonymous, Falge said.

The Barracudas received the donation in 1981 and a special committee was formed to prepare proposals for its use.

A proposal for a new swimming pool was developed by local architect Gene Takigawa and the committee visited a San Jose area high school noted for its excellent swimming facility.

But a new facility was beyond the financial reach of Carmel, the committee decided.

"The costs were just astronomical. The donation would not even begin to pay for it and then we would have to find some way to pay for the maintenance," Falge explained.

THE CARMEL Barracuda Swim Club and the entire Carmel-area community will be the beneficiaries of a $200,000 gift from an anonymous donor. A special committee is scheduled to meet after the holidays to develop plans for a program financed by the donation. Above are members of the 1982 Barracudas.

Plans were then "put in a holding pattern" when the school district began to consider closure of either the high school or middle school because of declining enrollment.

The board of education decided in early October of 1982 not to pursue the proposal for several more years.

'NOW THAT it appears the district will probably not close one of the campuses, we can go ahead with our plans," Falge said.

Although the Barracudas will work closely with the school district on any swim program, Falge pointed out that he wants the entire community involved once the project is completed.

"This is not just a Barracuda project or a school project. We want the entire community involved. Any program that we start will be open to the entire Carmel community," he said.

A facility that can be used by the entire community year-round has been the subject of much discussion because local swimming opportunities are limited.

The nearest indoor swimming pool is in Seaside. There are two public pools in the Carmel area. The high school pool is utilized all year and another facility at the Carmel Valley Community Center is operated by the Barracudas in the summer. The Valley pool is closed in the winter, Falge explained.

The Barracudas have an agreement with the school district for use of the pools, said business manager Robert Zampatti.

Operating expenses of the Valley pool were $15,461 from the period of May to September. Income generated from Barracuda donations, fees and lesson charges totaled $13,089.

The high school pool had operating expenses of $9,765 and income was listed at $5,918, Zampatti said.

The deficits are covered by monies from the general education fund, Zampatti added.

The non-profit Barracudas Swim Club is open to boys and girls from five to 18 years of age "regardless of ability," Falge said. The $10 monthly dues are waived for those unable to afford them, he added.

The Barracudas swim in area competitions and operate other swim programs, including swimming lessons. Between 125 and 150 area youngsters participated in the Barracudas during the height of the summer season. Coach of the Barracudas is Larry Challis.

Anyone who would like to join the Barracudas may call Challis at 659-4670.

Persons who would like to make tax-deductible contributions for a swimming facility may contact Falge at 625-1921.

Falge said he has become active in the Barracudas because of his family's interest in swimming. The family has lived in Carmel for 15 years.

He and his wife, Bitten, swim nearly every day at the Pebble Beach Beach and Tennis Club. Three of his children who live at home are active in Carmel High School water sports. Daughter Katie was co-captain of the girls' varsity swimming team, and sons Greg and Mike played water polo this year and plan to be on the boys' swimming team.

The women's movement is alive and well, says Carmel author/lawyer

By ROBERT MISKIMON

REMEMBER the women's movement?

Reports of its death are premature, according to Carmel author and constitutional lawyer Riane Eisler.

The crusade for equality of the sexes suffered a devastating blow with the recent defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment, but the struggle for equal rights is still alive, Ms. Eisler said.

"The defeat of the ERA was a major defeat, but it was also a signal that we have a long haul ahead," Ms. Eisler told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

"There's no question the women's movement is alive and well politically because women are recognized as an important political force, especially since the last election."

Ms. Eisler is a constitutional lawyer, director of the Institute for Futures Forecasting, and founder of the Los Angeles Women's

'There's no question the women's movement is alive and well politically because women are recognized as an important political force, especially since the last election.'

Center legal program. She is the author of The Equal Rights Handbook: What ERA Means to Your Life, Your Rights, and the Future as well as other books.

She has contributed frequent articles to The Humanist magazine on the equal rights movement, and is involved in a number of political organizations including the National Organization of Women, League of Women Voters, and the National Women's Political Caucus.

Ms. Eisler was active in the local campaign in support of Prop. 12, the nuclear freeze initiative, and is a contributor to Planned Parenthood. She has had numerous speaking engagements before local organizations on the Monterey Peninsula.

Despite some well-publicized fatigue on the liberal left of the political spectrum, and the oft-observed disaffection of Americans with social causes, Ms. Eisler believes the current conservative political climate in the nation may result in renewed vigor for the women's movement.

"There is indeed a women's movement," she emphasized. "This is not a revolution that is violent, however. The feminist movement is the cutting edge and necessary ingredient if we're going to complete the changes started with the Enlightenment."

Such scholarly talk doesn't seem strained when it comes from Riane Eisler. She has spent the last five years researching and writing a multi-discipline thesis on feminism which encompasses anthropology, history, sociology, economics and literature.

The work has grown to some 800 manuscript pages and there is no end in sight, Ms. Eisler said. Now she is in the wrestling agonies of trying to decide whether to chop the thing into separate books or simply condense it into a single, massive publication.

"It's a new conceptual framework," Ms. Eisler said. "It grows out of a comparison between the traditional, male-dominated, authoritarian social systems and egalitarian systems with sexual equality. I've been working on this for five years, looking at history, pre-history, and anthropology to see if there are inter-connections."

"The main thesis is that we've got to make the sexual revolution a top priority or we'll blow ourselves up," Ms. Eisler said. "This is a pro-survival thrust."

And here is where Ms. Eisler has something new to say, something she has put into print in The Humanist on several occasions: War-mongering and aggressive militarism are extensions of male-dominated society where the ideal male stereotype is that of a warrior, a killer.

"Male dominance distorts both sexes," Ms. Eisler said. "In our society, all the male heroes are killers. We've based our whole society on the idea that because somebody is bigger and can beat somebody else up, they should be in control."

"Our social priorities are masculine. They center around conquest — conquest of women, other men, and nature. The feminine priorities — social welfare, education, cooperation — don't have a chance in this system."

Although the roots of feminism can be traced as far back as ancient Greece, realization of sexual equality has never been a more pressing concern than it is today because of the precarious balance of destructive nuclear forces, Ms. Eisler said.

"We're at a very critical juncture in world history. The system is disintegrating because it's driving us toward nuclear war. Nothing is working properly; this is a logical result of this absurdly imbalanced system. Many see in the women's movement the hope of changing it," she said.

Ms. Eisler was born in 1932 in Austria and fled with her family from the Nazis — along with a shipload of other European Jews — to Cuba in 1939. She lived in Cuba until she was 14, then moved to Los Angeles. She is an honors graduate of the University of California, nia, Los Angeles and the UCLA School of Law. She lived for a year in Israel before she moved to Carmel in 1979.

"Being a refugee child and living in different cultures made me very sensitive to inequality," Ms. Eisler said. Although she is regarded a leader in the women's movement today, she has not always been a feminist.

"I had no feminist inclinations at all until the late 1960s," she revealed. "I quit my marriage, my job, and smoking all in three months. A lot of women were doing what I was doing, but we were doing it without any knowledge of each other."

Ms. EISLER is now married to social psychologist/author David Loye, but part of their marriage contract stipulates they will use their own last names. She has two daughters — Andrea and Loren — who attend college in Southern California.

"lesbianism and celibacy are simply ways of escape from a male-dominated society, she said. "The theory is that it's nonsense to talk about an egalitarian society if your model is based on dominance and sub-dominance."

"For people to fit into a more egalitarian system, the social structure has to change. Lately, I've been shifting my thinking from the effect of sexual inequality to questions of war and peace, equality and authoritarianism, sex stereotypes and male dominance."

Despite much public visibility and some actual progress in the women's movement in the late 1960s and early 1970s, the political climate has shifted toward the traditional male-dominated pattern, Ms. Eisler noted. This is only a temporary "regression" which eventually will lead to more progress toward sexual equality, she believes.

"Today this is a most important issue, to have a clear understanding of the implications of male dominance. In the 1960s, men were saying they didn't want to fight wars and be violent. They were adopting some more 'feminine' behaviors. People are frightened and we need to go below the surface to find what keeps imbalancing us. We will find that it is the fact our social values are masculine."

'The arms race is bankrupting the world. As long as the hero every man emulates is a killer, you really can't expect these men to grow up and stop building nuclear weapons.'

Ms. Eisler has an explanation for the militaristic behavior of nations, such as Israel, under female leaders, such as the late Golda Meir: "They are women who are still acting like men. They are just extensions of male-dominated social patterns."

THE STRUGGLE for sexual equality holds the key to progress in a number of other global issues, such as peace and prosperity, Ms. Eisler believes.

"Feminists are on the leading edge of the peace movement," she said. "Dr. Helen Caldecott, for instance, started the Women's Party for Peace and then changed the name to the Women's Movement for Nuclear Disarmament."

"The arms race is bankrupting the world. As long as the hero every man emulates is a killer, you really can't expect these men to grow up and stop building nuclear weapons."

Ms. Eisler offered this analysis of the importance attached to sexual equality by different points on the political spectrum in a guest editorial she wrote for Women's International Network News:

"Those on the 'liberal' left and center who speak of freedom, equality, and disarmament continue to see sexual equality and other women's issues as peripheral concerns — something for action after more important things are done. But those on the right, who relentlessly work for hierarchical orderings, authoritarian controls, and increased armaments correctly perceive that sexual inequality is the cornerstone of the system they seek to impose on us all."

So far as the future of the Equal Rights Amendment is concerned, Ms. Eisler believes there is no point in mounting a renewed crusade for its passage until the current political "regression" in the United States has passed.

"We don't have it straight in the middle and left," she said. "They have it very straight on the political right. We're seeing a replay of a period like the 1950s, when we had a strictly male-dominated society and the in-group. But it's getting more and more serious."

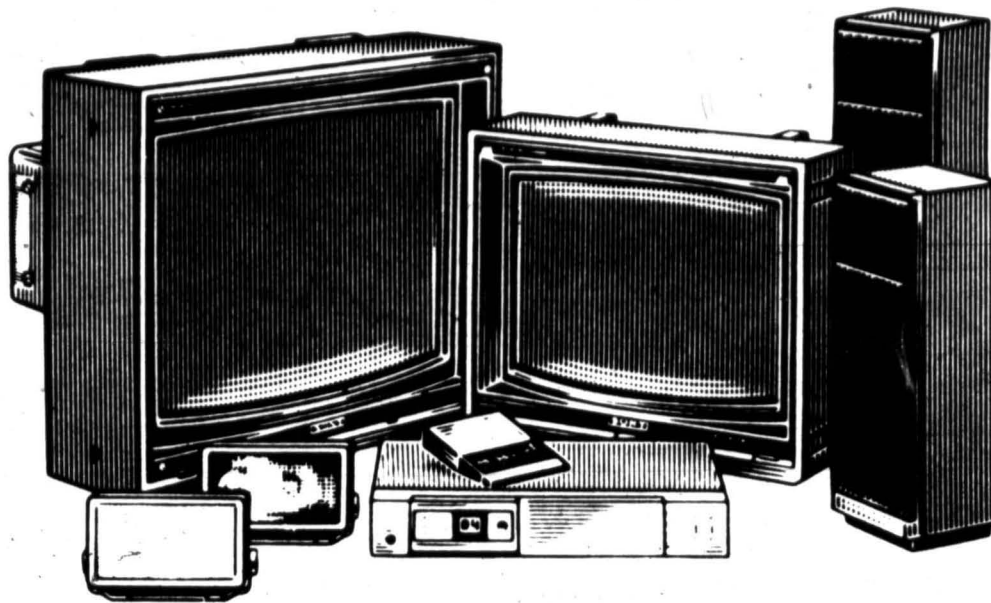

"People are tired of causes on the middle and left because we haven't gotten anywhere. We can give up or we can reexamine the situation and sort out our priorities. Feminism is the critical element in sorting out our priorities and in attacking global problems."

Despite — or perhaps because of — a political climate which is unfavorable to feminist goals, Ms. Eisler believes there is room for hope.

"The Reagan administration has declared war on women," she said. "The damage this administration has done in their lives is something women will begin to feel. And that will be translated into action. The campaign against the ERA was one of widespread lies. A lot of the money to finance it came from industrial sources because a lot of men profit from the fact women, on the average, are still paid only 59 cents for every dollar that men earn."

What should Carmel do with the Flanders Estate?

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A SPECIAL CARMEL committee wants to sell the city-owned Flanders Estate for condominium development and use the funds to finance a parking lot at Sunset Center.

Of course, Councilman David Maradei was only joking when he reported that after a Dec. 1 committee meeting to Mayor Charlotte Townsend and City Administrator Doug Peterson.

But in reality, any proposal by the committee to sell the Flanders Estate and adjacent Mission Trail Park property will be vehemently opposed, according to a majority of council members surveyed by the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

Maradei, who also serves on the committee, is opposed to sale of the 14.9-acre Flanders Estate, which is part of the city-owned Mission Trail Park.

"My own personal opinion is we should use it as a resource for the city. It's a unique building on a beautiful piece of property," Maradei said. "I think to sell it would be a disservice to the community. I think we'll be able to find a good use for it."

Councilman Frank Lloyd said the city does not need the money that would be gained from the sale of the property and two-story mansion.

"I feel that's a very poor idea. I'm definitely against selling it for any reason," he explained. "We don't need the money for other projects. I don't think we have any other projects that would make the sale necessary."

Mayor Townsend called any sale proposal "unacceptable."

Councilman Robert Stephenson was more reserved in his comments.

"I can see merit in both proposals," he said in reference to a plan to lease the site to a non-profit organization. "I would like to explore all alternatives before making a definite commitment."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold was out of town and unavailable for comment.

The possibility of selling the Flanders Estate was discussed briefly at the committee meeting, which was held in the mansion.

However, the city council-appointed panel appears to favor a lease agreement between the city and a non-profit organization. In return for minimal rent, the organization would be responsible for maintenance of the mansion.

"It looks like we're leaning in the direction of a qualified non-profit organization," Maradei said.

MAYOR TOWNSEND and Councilman Lloyd also favor the concept.

"I agree with the plan to lease it to a non-profit organization as long as they are willing to renovate the mansion," Mrs. Townsend said.

"I'm open-minded. I don't have any definite plans for Flanders except that I have always felt that the use by the art institute is a very suitable use," Lloyd said.

Flanders Mansion was built in 1924 by Paul and Grace Flanders. Paul Flanders died in 1944 and his wife passed away in 1967.

The council purchased the site in 1972 for $275,000. The mansion has been leased for the past decade, but the council has never been able to agree upon a long-term use.

In 1976, the council combined about 13 acres of the Flanders property with another 22 acres from the old Doolittle Estate to form Mission Trail Park, which stretches southwest from Hatton to Rio Roads.

The north end of the mansion is leased to the Carmel Art Institute under the direction of John Cunningham. The southern portion is leased to a private citizen, David Araujo. Both pay $400 monthly rent to the city.

Because the leases are due to expire at the end of this month, the city council has appointed a special committee to develop recommendations for the future of Flanders Mansion and Mission Trail Park.

Since there is opposition to selling the mansion, the panel spent much of its first session on how to finance renovation work if the site is retained.

"If we do find a use for it, we have to decide how to pay for the maintenance," Maradei told the committee in his opening remarks Dec. 1.

"Are we going to do something tomorrow, five years from now or 10 years down the road?" Maradei continued. "We might want to put it in a holding pattern until we do decide what to do with it."

Committee member Bob Evans, also a member of the forestry commission, agreed that finances will probably be a major problem.

"The financial cost of running it every year is even more important part of this than even the management of it," he said. "As I look at Flanders Mansion, I hesitate to think of how much money we need to spend to make it presentable."

IT WOULD cost the city approximately $200,000 to meet building and safety code requirements at Flanders Mansion, Maradei predicted.

"It's going to cost us a lot of money to do something to this building," he said.

City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio explained that the council has appropriated $10,000 in the 1982-83 budget for maintenance of all city buildings.

Committee member Bill Doolittle said he believes the city needs to take a "fresh look" at the Flanders Estate.

"I think we have an obligation to consider possible long term uses and possibly a sale. We have to take a completely fresh look at this, in my way of thinking," he said.

As an outgrowth of the financial discussions, the panel came up with a proposal to lease the site to a non-profit organization.

"That would lessen the cost of maintenance for the city," Maradei said.

Any long-term lease should include provisions that would allow public access to the events at Flanders Mansion, Doolittle added.

"The use would have to include with it access. It can't be just a special interest organization," he said. "I don't think the city could justify being a landlord in that kind of situation."

The committee favored leasing the site to an organization that would allow public access. Committee members also favored a museum-type facility that would house art, historic artifacts and original manuscripts by writers who have called Carmel home.

Parking would also present a problem, committee members said.

In past council discussions on the future of the Flanders Estate, area residents opposed any use that would generate more traffic along Hatton Road.

The committee also briefly discussed the possibility of selling four lots of flat park property off Martin Road.

Maradei estimated the lots have a market value of approximately $150,000 each. The money could be used to repair the mansion.

"No doubt there would be opposition to this," he said.

However, Evans pointed out that the possibility of selling that property should not be immediately discarded.

"It's something we should think about. We would lose something that is not vitally important to gain something that is vitally important," he said.

Evans recommended that committee members visit the site prior to the next meeting.

The next meeting of the committee is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Jan. 5 at city hall.

Maradei suggested that any members of the public who have proposals for the site should write the committee in care of Carmel City Hall, PO Box CC, 93921.

Special meeting is today over Carmel River flood

DISGRUNTLED RESIDENTS of the Carmel River lagoon can voice concerns about recent flooding in a special meeting with Monterey County officials at 5 p.m. today (Dec. 9) at Carmel River School.

The meeting was called by Supervisor William Peters last week in response to criticism of the way county employees handled the Nov. 19 flood.

Peters' administrative assistant, Steve Slade, announced the meeting last week when he met with members of the citizen environmental group, Carmel River Watch.

Scheduled to attend the Carmel River School meeting are Bruce McClain, director of the public works department, and Bob Binder, acting director of the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District.

Slade said Peters and other county officials "want to get to the bottom of the charges" made by area residents that county employees on the scene stood around and said "it's not my job" when asked to assist flood victims.

The meeting is also intended to discuss citizen ideas about how such an incident might be prevented in the future, Slade said.

Lagoon residents blame Monterey County officials for the flooding of three homes near the Carmel River lagoon after heavy storm runoff into the Carmel River and a high tide in Carmel Bay caused waters to rise beyond the banks of the lagoon.

Residents said county public works crews should have cleared a channel for the river to drain into the bay. They also allege county workers on the scene told them "it's not my job" when asked to assist in opening a channel for the river.

Two local residents armed with shovels eventually cut a swath for the river open just before flood waters subsided.

But Slade told the 11 persons on hand for the Carmel River Watch meeting last week that "no county worker has specifically been named" by residents who charge county workers told them "it's not my job."

"I don't doubt that it happened, but we can't just charge everybody there," Slade said.

He asked that anyone who knows the name of a county employee who was uncooperative to come forward.

Slade said county officials are also investigating the reasons the county is "charged with opening a channel on property owned by the state."

He also told the group a lack of communication and coordination with other agencies underscored the problems and the meeting in Carmel River School will address that problem.

"Absolutely no one knew there would be a problem up through 11 the night before," Slade told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "The county didn't get its first call about the situation until six the next morning."

"It was an extraordinary event that happened. It all happened at night when it was dark."

Richard Dalsemer of River Watch told Slade residents in the area believe county workers maintained an attitude of "looking out for themselves so they won't get blamed for taking initiative."

He told this newspaper such problems are "not surprising in a public bureaucracy. People will do as little as they possibly can until they are directly instructed to do otherwise."

Pat Bernardi of River Watch told Slade flooded conditions along the river "happen every single year, and this is the kind of system we still have?"

She called the Nov. 19 incident a "minor disaster," adding that if the local government response was so ineffective during the minor disaster, "if we have a major disaster the thing to do is to crawl under your house. You'd probably be as safe there as anywhere."

The Conscience of Carmel

Hatton Canyon and CVPOA

By GUNNAR NORBERG

I'M LOOKING at a copy of a letter sent out last month by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association's Board of Directors to its membership, asking CVPOA members to indicate on an enclosed postcard whether they want the long-disputed Hatton Canyon freeway built.

And at the very bottom of the CVPOA letter is a printed line which thumb-nails the purpose for which the CVPOA exists: "To preserve, protect, and defend the natural beauty and the resources of the Carmel Valley and the State of California."

The Hatton Canyon freeway would extend from the Carpenter Street intersection on Highway 1 for 2.7 miles south to the point where Carmel Valley Road begins, and a bit beyond. Big interchanges would have to be constructed both at the north and south ends of the freeway.

In a detailed report made last February, John West, deputy director of the state Department of Transportation, acknowledged that highway construction in the Hatton Canyon "would be controversial because of scarring, removal of trees, noise intrusion, and growth impacts."

And because of those same objections, it would seem to me that the CVPOA, in view of its stated motto, should have every reason to oppose the gutting of the Hatton Canyon just to force a freeway through. Besides the present estimated cost of building such a freeway is $17 million — much more than the estimated cost of any alternative highway expenditure contemplated along the present Highway 1.

Certainly the "scarring" to which West alluded — the huge cuts and fills that would be required — with the destruction of the forest characteristics of the Hatton Canyon, would detract from the "natural beauty" of the terrain at the entrance of the Carmel Valley, something the CVPOA has for many years exerted much effort "to preserve, protect, and defend."

Other objectionable results of Hatton Canyon highway building which West mentioned — "noise intrusion" and "growth impacts" — could certainly also have a devastating effect on efforts made through the years by the CVPOA to reduce every kind of pollution and to discourage both premature and excessive development in Carmel Valley.

The letter by the CVPOA Board of Directors to its membership does, of course, refer to the various alternatives to the possible construction of a Hatton Canyon freeway, — alternatives which were also included in the detailed February report by John West. All but one of those alternatives concerns possible changes which could be made along Highway 1 between the Carpenter Street intersection and the one at Rio Road. The only exception to all those alternatives is a very simple one indeed: To plan to do nothing at all for the immediate future along Highway 1.

In fact, as most readers no doubt already know, the state transportation department has recommended to the state transportation commission that it terminate further consideration of putting any state highway through Hatton Canyon and to dispose of the right-of-way it already owns there.

The expectation is that the state transportation commission will sometime soon hold somewhere in the Monterey Peninsula area a hearing to gather local views before it acts on the recommendation from its transportation department to abandon Hatton Canyon as a future highway route and to prepare to offer the right-of-way for sale.

Such an offer would first have to be made to a public body such as the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, before it is made to the public. The John West report points out that the existing freeway route in the Hatton Canyon "is largely zoned as open space," a zoning which would fit it for some kind of park use. Any other use, the West report adds, would require a change in zoning and "would likely be controversial and possibly result in extended litigation."

BECAUSE THE EXISTING state-owned right-of-way along Highway 1 is wide enough to accommodate six lanes, with a seventh turn lane, the state transportation department recommends that the existing roadway be expanded to the full six-lane width from the Carpenter Street intersection on the north to Rio Road on the south. The cost of such an increased Highway 1 widening is estimated to be something like $3.7 million, thus only a little more than one-fifth the cost of a Hatton Canyon freeway. However there would be substantial loss of trees in the right-of-way to accommodate the expanded roadway.

Since the only segment of Highway 1 which shows an accident ratio in excess of the state average is the two-lane portion from the Ocean Avenue intersection to the point where Carmel Valley Road begins, it seems to me that widening that two-lane portion to just four lanes would be sufficient to improve safety. Such limited widening would also be much less environmentally damaging than would a possible maximum expansion to a full six lanes.

While there is some merit in trying to reduce the accident ratio, which I believe could be accomplished by widening to four lanes, there seems to me no sense in the six-lane proposal which would simply lead to more and more overdevelopment both at the entrance to the Carmel Valley and farther inland. This would be destructive to the environmental principles for which the CVPOA has long stood.

On the final page of his February report, John West summarizes the state transportation department's views:

"It has been 26 years since the Hatton Canyon routing was adopted. Construction was not programmed then and is still not programmed, with little likelihood of being fundable in the foreseeable future.

"There is no need for a high capacity facility as envisioned. There is no planned freeway development to the south and most traffic is of a local nature. The existing highway corridor offers potentially affordable improvement alternatives, including the 'no project' alternative.

"The Hatton Canyon routing has been controversial. With this in mind, it is not realistic to continue to base planning on eventual construction. There is little purpose in keeping a transportation corridor open that is unlikely to be implemented. It is time to start rethinking transportation planning on the basis of living with the existing highway corridor."

In his letter to his membership, CVPOA President Richard Dalsemer asked that members return the postcard he enclosed, conveying their views on the Hatton Canyon-Highway 1 alternatives, by Dec. 15.

The postcard provides that the signature of a member is not required. It could have been appropriate to ask for a signature so that it could be determined that the person who returned the postcard was actually a CVPOA member. This would also have established the validity of the result of the postcard polling. Meanwhile, I hope that all CVPOA members return their postal cards to President Dalsemer, CVPOA, Box 157, Carmel Valley, 93924, by Dec. 15.

Grassroots campaign will keep median alive

A CARMEL VALLEY grassroots effort will keep Carmel Valley Road blooming.

A crew of 15 California Conservation Corps troops left Carmel Valley last week after they completed landscape work on the two-mile median strip. It was the culmination of a six-month effort spearheaded by Karin Strasser-Kauffman and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

The latest effort to beautify Carmel Valley uses native plants.

In the past, when Monterey County landscaped the center divider, plants were imported from outside the area and required constant maintenance which the county could not follow up. As a result, the median strip deteriorated into what Strasser-Kauffman called a "weed strip."

"I got disgusted whenever I drove down Carmel Valley Road," she said.

She was told the county no longer had the funds to replant the divider and could not maintain any landscape work. County officials did promise to cooperate, whenever possible, in any effort undertaken by private citizens to plant the strip.

Mrs. Strasser-Kauffman, a member of the CVPOA Board of Directors, received $1,000 in "seed money" from the property owners association to undertake the beautification project. She recruited other volunteers to collect more than $6,000 from Carmel Valley residents.

Alice Nehdy, a landscape designer and member of the Native Plants Society of Carmel Valley, was recruited to donate time to the project and she drew up plans that would utilize only plants native to Carmel Valley.

Mrs. Strasser-Kauffman contacted the director of the CCC, who visited the area and declared the project worthy of CCC participation. And since the CCC already had scheduled bank repair work for the mouth of the Carmel River this week, he sent a crew of 15 to Carmel Valley a week early.

Some of the work was delayed because of the heavy rains, but the youth group and several community volunteers finished the project late last week.

Mrs. Strasser-Kauffman said the CVPOA will sponsor a dedication ceremony within several weeks.

"This has been a grassroots success story," she said. "There has been some real community participation."

"Earl Moser went around his housing development and solicited several thousand dollars. Herb Holbrook and George VanWay went around the Del Mesa Carmel community and collected more than $2,000," Mrs. Strasser-Kauffman said.

"Barbara Olson knocked on doors along the windy roads and hills and had terrific response. The Chamber of Commerce and I met and they donated a nice sum."

"We had contributions come in from $2 to $500. The Kiwanis Club was supportive. All the garden and native plant clubs in the area were very helpful."

She said the next priority is to form a committee to maintain the center strip. "We want to ensure that (the planting) is not wasted again," she said.

"Out here we're always talking about maintaining the beauty of the area, but here was a chance to really do something about it and the response was tremendous."

"It was a very pleasant project because so many pleasant people were involved."

NEARLY TWO miles of the center divider on Carmel Valley Road has a new look since the California Conservation Corps and volunteers last week pulled the weeds and replaced them with native plants. The effort resulted from a Carmel Valley "grassroots effort" to beautify the road. Donations of about $6,000 were raised in the campaign.

Carmel planners to consider LCP

The Carmel Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on proposed implementation measures for the Carmel Local Coastal Program when it meets at 4 p.m. Dec. 15 at city hall.

Commissioners will review proposed ordinances that would implement the coastal plan approved by the Carmel City Council in 1980 and certified by the Coastal Commission one year later. The implementation ordinances are required by the Coastal Act.

If commissioners determine that the proposed ordinances are sufficient to implement the LCP, they will forward the measures to the city council for adoption. The implementation program must be approved by the Coastal Commission by mid-1983.

After the program is approved by the Coastal Commission, the ordinances will be incorporated in the city general plan, now under revision.

The implementation ordinances include provisions to legalize "granny" housing and "second kitchens" to increase the housing stock and also meet LCP requirements to provide more low and moderate income rental units in the city.

"Granny" housing is limited to persons 60 years and over. "Second kitchens" are small rentals that are usually converted garages or rooms inside the main house.

The implementation program recommends that applicants for such housing units be required to obtain a use permit from the city.

In addition, draft implementation measures would limit the height of houses to 18 feet in the beach front area.

The planning commission meeting is open to the public.

Flag discovered
at Bruno's Market

By FLORENCE MASON

ONE OF THE NICEST stories to come our way recently is about a flag that was unearthed in the attic of Bruno's Market recently.

The story begins long before that — in August of 1956, when then-President Eisenhower visited the peninsula. President and Mrs. Eisenhower arrived by special train and stayed at the Cypress Point Country Club, where "Ike" played four rounds of golf before he returned to Washington. The Eisenhowers also visited Carmel Mission. Let Bruno's employee Judy McCurdy tell the rest of the story:

"It was the Sunday morning of the Eisenhowers' visit. My husband Bob, a California Highway Patrol officer, was on his way to church down at the corner (Carmel Presbyterian Church). When he saw the parade he ran back, pulled a flag out of its place in front of the store, then ran all the way to Eisenhower's car. There, he asked the President if he would salute his flag.

"It would be an honor," Eisenhower said, doing so. Walt was in tears when he came back to the store, he was so happy.

"Eventually, the flag was put into the attic, probably when Pilot, who built the store in 1956, sold it eight or nine years after. It hasn't been used all this time."

Not until recently, that is. Fermin Sanchez, whose parents are now the owners of Bruno's Market (at the corner of Junipero and Sixth) found it in the attic — a flag with 48 stars. He showed it to long-time employee Judy, who exclaimed, "I don't believe it!" and related the story of the special salute that flag received many years ago.

A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS AT THE PLAZA

The day after Thanksgiving was the start of the 23 days of Christmas at Carmel Plaza. But preparations for Santa, his elves and his Victorian home began many months ago.

Last spring, Plaza owners put in their request for "a fabulous fantasy land" for the holiday season and the first step was taken. A visit to Barranco, an outstanding display house in San Francisco, began the selection of animated characters.

In May, plans for gazebos and small shelters were sought and a "storybook" ad for Santa's visit to the Plaza began to take form under the hands of Ornel Hutchinson, also the creator of the marvelous art used by the Pine Cone/Outlook for its Bach Festival covers.

Summer meant completion of purchases from Barranco and selection of Santa's shelter, to be built alongside the Plaza fountain and to be kept for use again next year. Santa's suit would have to be the best, of course, and it was ordered from the east, with lights, ornaments and toys to decorate the Plaza's 30-foot tree.

In August, Catherine Becker started to work on five 30-inch elves, head maintenance man Ed Winslow started building Santa's child-size shelter, and manager Maggie Hays ordered 100 pounds of candy canes, each in its own cellophane bag.

The pace accelerated as the fall months arrived. The Christmas jingle for radio and television was approved, an opera singer was hired to sing it and work continued on the elves, the shelter and toys for the tree. It all came together Nov. 26.

The seven-by-seven foot Victorian house for Santa may attract the most attention from adults but Santa, of course, is what the children may see first. It won't be a place for commercial picture taking. There will be small candy gifts for each child, however. And children who can't get to the Plaza will be visited by this same Santa in local hospitals and some local schools.

Don't tell your children, but Santa is a young man who has a couple of little boys himself. David Simmons, described by Plaza publicist Jack Hanford as "a nice, gentle sort of person," has been Santa before, for a church group. He is a big man with a rich voice — just right.

Among the many who should get credit for this first-time Plaza Christmas wonderland, two are special: Catherine Becker, who had the five elves ready just a few days before she gave birth to her own elf; Ed Winslow, who with the Plaza's maintenance crew, did "all the big stuff" and also all the details, such as the etchings of candy canes on the shelter window.

Santa will be in his Victorian home by the fountain from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. every Saturday and Sunday until Christmas.

ALPHABET SOUP

Wendy Phelps told her 14-year-old daughter that she was going to open a shop and sell everything "from A to Z." Lisa said: "Alphabet soup!" And so Ms. Phelps' new shop in Del Dono Court (Dolores at Fifth) was named.

"I always wanted to have my own business," Ms. Phelps said. "I have put together things I like and have enjoyed buying for others. There's a variety, for sure."

Prominent in the shop are Appalachian quilts — a line suggested by Wendy Phelps' parents when they saw them on a tour of the South. It gives Ms. Phelps special pleasure to help preserve a native craft. Quilts can also be made to order, with the customer picking out the design and colors from swatches at Alphabet Soup.

There are other quilted items, too: animals, place mats, aprons. And quilt-lined baskets. There are bags and boxes and showcase shells, photographs, greeting cards — truly everything "from A to Z."

A few weeks before the shop opened, Ms. Phelps said: "I'm not getting a lot of sleep, but I'm having a lot of fun!" Although most of her working experience has been in nursing, she has always wanted to do something like this. At one time she came close, with her own small-scale design business, and she has taught pottery making. But Alphabet Soup brings it all together for her.

A single parent, Ms. Phelps has two other children besides Lisa: Ashley, 12, and Dennis Jr., who is nine.

REPORT FROM THE CROSSROADS

Completion of The Crossroads the week before Thanksgiving was marked by an announcement that 10 new stores are open or soon will be — most of them before Christmas.

We'll list them today, and feature one or more each week as time and space permit. The variety is impressive:

- Geppetto's Toys.
- The Crossroad's Jeweler. Already opened and owned by Kirkor Kocok, well-known locally as owner of a jewelry store on San Carlos Street.
- Cappuccino Carmel, selling cappuccino and other specialty machines.
- Carmel Wet Fish Market: to sell fresh fish, crab cocktails, etc.
- Charnel's, a new lingerie store.

"IT'S WORKING OUT NICELY"

Across from a park in Carmel Valley he helped to establish, Dr. John Von Berg has just acquired a new associate and partner and "expanded the capabilities" of his Family Dental Care Center on Ford Road.

"It's working out quite nicely," Dr. Von Berg said. "We enlarged the lab and changed our bookkeeping system, acquired some new equipment too. So we had to expand the building itself."

There was a special note of satisfaction when he spoke about his new associate and partner, because it's all in the family. Dr. Stephen Austin is Dr. Von Berg's son-in-law and Pamela Von Berg Austin, a dental hygienist, is also a member of the staff.

The Austins are remodeling a home in the Valley near the airstrip. Before he came to Carmel Valley, Dr. Austin was director of a U.S. Public Health Service Dental Clinic in Stockton.

Dr. Von Berg and his wife Marilyn also live in the Valley. Mrs. Von Berg is active in the League of Women Voters. Her husband, by his own admission, "came down here from a practice in Palo Alto to take it easy." For him, that means not only a busy practice but an long list of community activities.

He is a former president of Kiwanis, a director of the Carmel Valley Community Center and, with Randy Randazzo, an instigator of the park he can see from the windows of those newly expanded offices.

A NEW BANK HAS CARMEL CONNECTIONS

A group of peninsula business men and women think Monterey needs a bank for local business and professional people, so they have submitted an application to charter one.

Among the organizers is Howard Bucquet, partner in the Carmel River Inn and part owner of the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center.

Several of the other organizers are Carmel area residents, including Charlie Bancroft, Robert Sheppard and Jack Craft. Also listed as organizers and potential members of the bank's first board of directors are Lewis Fenton, June Duran, Monterey Mayor Gerald Fry, Dr. William McAfee and Jean Thomas.

Spokesman Bancroft, president and chief executive officer of California Mutual Insurance Company, said: "With local financial institutions being bought up by large, out-of-town firms, we believe a bank owned and operated by people from this area will be more responsive to the financial needs of its targeted customers."

It is estimated that processing the application through federal channels will take four to six months.

A FESTIVE "THANK YOU"

If you resist getting into the Christmas spirit early, the recent holiday preview and open house at Flor de Carmel would have made that very difficult.

For the second year since he opened the Mission Street florist shop, Charles (Terry) Hendrix displayed Thanksgiving and Christmas goodies, and treated his guests to wine, cider and hors d'oeuvres. "We had a really good time last year and it's a great way to say thank you to our good customers," Hendrix said.

The scene was festive, with decorated trees, wreaths, wall and door hangings, fresh flowers everywhere and evidence of the shop's way with silk and fabric flowers and plants as well. Our favorites included a shell tree (for that special wall) and a large deer made of sphagnum moss, with plant-stalk legs.

What people may not know is that Flor de Carmel is a place where you can rent all kinds of things for weddings and parties: arches, runners, candle holders and more.

THINKING ABOUT PACKAGES?

Sal Verde, who has had an upholstery shop in the Carmel Valley Village Center for 10 years, has added something new: a United Parcel Service pickup and delivery center.

Verde's Shipping Center is across from the village hardware store (The Village House) and it's open Monday through Friday. Sal will have some special Saturday openings too — next Saturday, the 11th, and also Saturday, Dec. 18.

"I'm still amazed at the things people ship with us or receive," said Elden Kunz, manager of the Mid-Valley Regional Shipping Center. "After all these years, you'd think we might have seen it all, but someone always comes up with something more unusual."

Among the "unusual" items: a two-headed broom, stuffed pheasants, tents, water plants and "what could be called a church usher's 'tickler.'" Kunz described that as a long pole with a knob on one end and a feather on the other.

"During Puritan days, the church ushers would tickle the ladies on the cheek if they fell asleep and use the knob more forcefully on the top of a man's head if he dozed off," Kunz said.

The size of items shipped by the Mid-Valley Regional Shipping Center has ranged from bathtubs for a plumbing company to dental implants.

Kunz, who used to live in Nebraska, started the center three years ago. Now he ships via United Parcel Service, air and motor freight. He sells shipping supplies and when time permits, packing is part of the service.

The center is just west of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center in the Mid-Valley Office Park, Dorris Drive at Center Street. Regular hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Expanded Christmas hours are offered Dec. 11 and 18.

Carmel faces reality of drug, alcohol abuse

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

CARMEL HAS finally awakened to the fact that drug, alcohol and family problems do exist on this side of the Monterey Peninsula.

That was the message stressed by Monterey Peninsula Youth Project officials in interviews with the Pine Cone/Outlook after their annual report indicated service to Carmel area residents has increased substantially since 1980.

"The families in Carmel are beginning to acknowledge that there are problems and that there are organizations like the Youth Project that can help," Executive Director Candace Ingram said. "There used to be an attitude that it couldn't happen here and that when things did happen, it was not acknowledged as a community problem, but as an isolated incident."

The Monterey Peninsula Youth Project offers a variety of free or low-cost services that range from family counseling to 24-hour crisis lines to the rehabilitation program in Seaside called Genesis House. Youth Project headquarters are at 590 Pearl St., Monterey.

Statistics show that there were 115 contacts with Carmel residents in fiscal year 1981-82. In addition, the Youth Project had contacts with 50 people who live outside the city limits or in Carmel Valley.

Ms. Ingram reported that this is twice as many as contacted just two years ago.

The increase does not necessarily mean that there is a tremendous number of new problems in the area. It just means that Carmel has begun to utilize the Youth Project as a service organization to help solve some of the problems, Ms. Ingram believes.

"It's more a reflection on the awareness of the people. We have been supported tremendously by the schools, the Carmel Valley Youth Center and the city," she said. "It's gratifying for us to see this happen, that our staff is being looked to as resource people to help."

Jeff Madnick, program coordinator of the Monterey Community Counseling Center, said cooperation in the schools has been important.

"It's a lot easier to have access and to put out the energy when the school administration is supportive," said Madnick, who joined the staff in 1980. "My impression is that before they operated on a denial basis that these problems don't exist."

"What they have come to realize is that the community can help itself. We are here as resource people, but it's up to them to make this thing work."

ALTHOUGH Ms. Ingram and Madnick agree that a major focal point of the project should be the schools, budget restrictions have forced cuts in services at the Carmel Unified School District.

"We have to catch the problems early and to catch them early, you have to catch them in the schools," Ms. Ingram said.

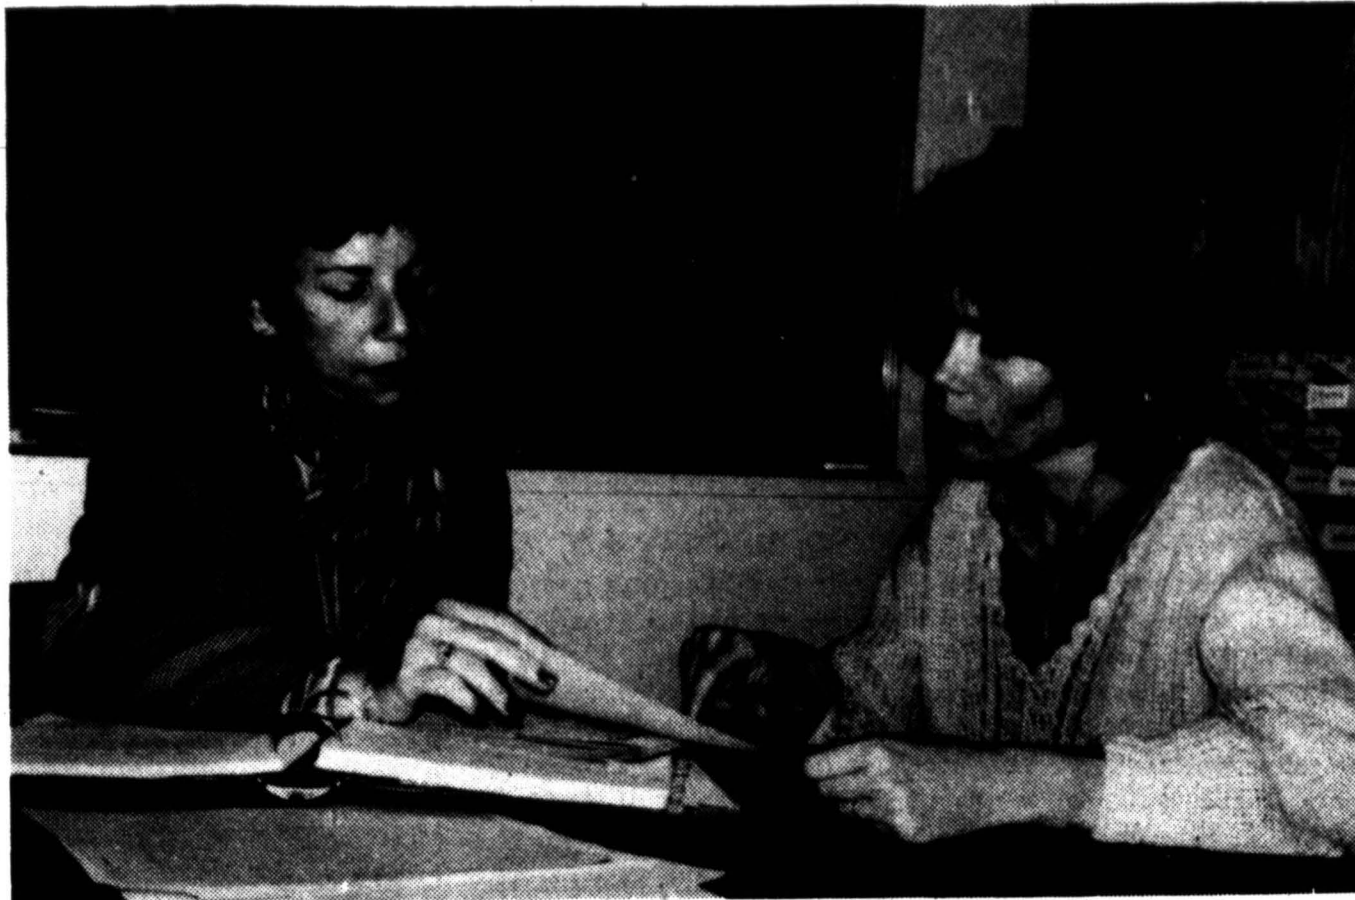

The Youth Project used to have a part-time counselor/referral person on the Carmel High School campus. But budget cutbacks have eliminated that program.

Last year the Youth Project had three counselors who spent one morning a week on nine different junior and high school campuses on the Monterey Peninsula.

Because of the fiscal restraints, the Youth Project no longer visits students at the school campuses. If a student or his family need counseling, they must go to the main office in Monterey.

"The first thing I'd like to see is a Youth Project counselor on every school campus. School counselors have more and more responsibilities and the time restraints forced on them makes it virtually impossible to deal with individual problems," Ingram said.

"That's an ideal situation. Realistically, I would like to see at least a counselor at the high school on a once a week basis," Ms. Ingram added.

TERI RAY, a Monterey Peninsula Youth Project senior counselor, conferred often with Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly (left) about different programs. However, because of budget cuts, the Youth

Project can no longer afford to offer counseling on the campus. Students who seek help must travel to the Monterey office on Pearl Street. (M.G. photo.)

Louise Tanous, a counselor at Carmel High School, said "it was nice to have someone right here on campus. We could make arrangements for the students to meet them once a week. It really worked out. Now they can't afford to be here. Now we use them solely as a referral service."

But Madnick is optimistic that the program may be restored in early spring. "It depends on our resources. There are a lot of budget things to work out, but I hope to begin the program again soon," he said.

Budget cutbacks have forced the Youth Project to cut its staff from 21 full-time employees in 1979-80 to five in 1982-83, Mrs. Ingram said.

The total budget has been reduced by about $50,000, primarily because of cuts in state and federal grants. The 1982-83 budget is approximately $1.1 million.

But the Youth Project is still effective despite the cutbacks, Ms. Ingram and Madnick believe.

"WE HAVE had tremendous support in the Carmel area from the Carmel Valley Youth Center and Parents Who Care," Madnick said. "Parents out there recognize that there are problems and want to help deal with them. Prior to 1980 there was a reluctance to want to deal with it."

"I think we are extremely effective despite our reduced staff. We have made a lot of internal changes that have increased our resource capabilities. Of course we're not doing everything we'd like to," added Ms. Ingram.

For example, Ms. Ingram pointed to a 19 percent recovery rate of Genesis House clients, compared to a 5 percent nation-wide recovery rate of those in similar drug and alcohol abuse programs.

The more common problems in Carmel are family tensions and drug and alcohol abuse, they said.

The family problems range from runaways to youngsters in trouble with the law.

"We can see a lot of this, especially with youngsters being picked up for lesser crimes like shoplifting," Madnick said. "It's more a cry for help that something is wrong. In our counseling with the families, we hope to identify what is wrong and how the families can work together to resolve their problems."

The shifting family structure is partially to blame for drug and alcohol abuse, Madnick pointed out. Many youngsters come from single-parent homes because of divorce, or both their parents work.

"There's increased pressure and little social support for the families and the kids. We (society) still haven't got our act together to help these single-parent families or working parents," Madnick said.

Drug and alcohol abuse is on the rise, Ms. Ingram explained.

"Cocaine is beginning to taper off and heroin is beginning to take off. Part of the reason is the progressive use of drugs. If you're using cocaine, you're a step away from moving up to heroin," she said.

"Heroin is definitely 'in' among the young adult generation. I haven't seen it to a large extent in the schools, but I have seen it," she said.

Referrals for drugs have been on the increase. Heroin-related referrals have increased 20 percent. There has been a 34 percent increase for marijuana and hashish-related referrals, 29 percent increase for cocaine referrals and alcohol-related referrals are up 24 percent, according to project figures.

Of those persons referred to the Genesis House program in 1981-82, a total of 30 were from Carmel, 22 from Carmel Valley and two from Big Sur.

The Monterey Peninsula Youth Project was created in 1969 as a non-profit, donation-supported organization called the Monterey County Drug Information and Youth Crisis Center. The program merged with another organization called "Project Youth" to become "Project Aquarius."

The project began an eight-year period of expansion between 1972 and 1980, thanks to increased state and federal grants. Funding was also bolstered when the cities of the Monterey Peninsula entered into a Joint Powers Agreement to help finance the program, which then changed its name to the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project.

The program now serves the county area from King City to Salinas to Big Sur.

The Monterey Community Counseling Center has moved from its Jackson Street location to the headquarters building on Pearl Street.

Madnick also pointed out the need for volunteers to keep the program going.

"We couldn't offer nearly as many programs as we do without the volunteers," he said. "We always need volunteers, especially for the 24-hour crisis telephone line."

The telephone line is manned by trained volunteers. The number is 373-4773.

Advisory panel to discuss parking ... again

Plans for a parking garage on the vacant lot at Sunset Center will be discussed when the Carmel General Plan Advisory Committee meets at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 16 at city hall.

The committee is scheduled to discuss plans for the parking facility with members of the cultural commission, which is the advisory agency responsible for activities at Sunset Center.

The panel originally was scheduled to hold the discussion at its Dec. 2 meeting. However, due to the lengthy agenda, the matter was postponed.

Cultural commission chairwoman Joyce Wright told the Pine Cone/Outlook that members have not developed a position on the proposed parking garage.

A special committee of the commission will develop a recommendation on a 20-year master plan for Sunset Center. The committee has not completed its proposal, Mrs. Wright said.

"We don't have a position on the parking lot yet. I hope that our buildings and grounds committee can also meet soon, but these things take time," Mrs. Wright said.

A plan has been developed to build a three-story facility on the vacant lot at the southeast corner of San Carlos Street and Eighth Avenue. The plan envisions two tiers of parking and a third tier, level with San Carlos Street, would be developed as a park.

The city council has postponed action on that proposal until architectural plans are completed on another project that would provide parking below a proposed Harrison Memorial Library annex at the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

The general plan committee also has adopted a series of recommendations for parking policies to be included in the revised general plan.

The proposals include recommendations to create more 20-minute parking zones, prohibit truck deliveries after 10 a.m. and restrict downtown parking to residents only between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m.

"If enough pressure is put on the employers and employees that they simply do not have a place to park downtown, maybe finally something will have to be done to find alternatives to driving and parking downtown," committee chairwoman Jane Mayer said.

The panel was appointed by the city council to develop recommendations for revisions to the general plan.

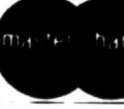

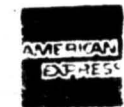

CANDACE INGRAM, executive director of the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project, said "there used to be an attitude that it couldn't happen here and that when things did happen, it was not acknowledged as a community problem, but as an isolated incident." (M.G. photo.)

Carmel River School holiday sing to be presented at Sunset Center

THE ANNUAL Carmel River School holiday sing — a program music coordinator Bill Purdy calls "our gift to the community" — is to be presented Dec. 15-16 at the Sunset Center Theater.

The approximately one-hour presentation is free and open to the public. The program begins at 7 p.m. both nights.

The opening night performance Dec. 15 will feature holiday songs from youngsters in kindergarten through third grade. In addition to the traditional songs like Jingle Bells and Frosty the Snowman, the students will perform traditional holiday songs from Hawaii, Austria, West Germany and Israel.

The following evening, beginning and advanced bands will take center stage to present a variety of holiday songs and such classics as Blowin' in the Wind and Tom Dooley. The bands are composed of students in grades third through fifth.

Previously, the annual sing was presented on only one evening. However, Purdy explained that it became necessary to offer two performances because of the program's popularity and the consolidation of River School and Carmel Woods School students, caused by the closure of Woods School.

Last year, there were approximately 225 students enrolled. With the addition of the students from Woods School, enrollment is up to about 425.

Purdy said he thinks of the holiday program as "our gift to the community." However, it serves a dual purpose.

"It's not just strictly a thing to entertain the parents. I also see it as a time of growth for the kids," he explained. "Just about every student in the school performs. They look forward to performing on a real stage with a real audience."

The band students rehearse during music class, at lunch and after school. Purdy incorporates rehearsal for the younger students in the half-hour weekly music classes.

The Sunset Center Theater is on the east side of San Carlos Street between Eighth and 10th avenues.

ANDREW HINES, a fifth grader, will be one of the band students who will perform at the annual Carmel River School holiday program.

FIFTH GRADER Chase Johnson will play clarinet when the Carmel River School bands perform a special holiday program Dec. 16 at the Sunset Center Theater. Choruses of students in kindergarten through third grades will perform the first evening, Dec. 15.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Mount Sinai Hospital School of Medicine in New York has recently begun the first Department of Geriatrics and Adult Development in the country, training doctors to care for elderly patients.

Dr. Robert N. Butler, in charge of setting up the new department, says that elderly patients have different metabolisms from other adults, different problems, and different medical needs. While seniors make up 12 percent of the nation's population, they account for 25 percent of drug sales and 30 percent of all medical care.

The Veterans Administration is attempting to locate some 57,000 former prisoners of war who might be eligible for new benefits. The new law makes it simpler for them to establish entitlement to compensation for certain psychological and nutrition-related disorders no matter when the symptoms appeared. Any former POW, captured during wartime or not, who thinks he might be entitled to these benefits should contact the nearest regional office of the Veterans Administration.

Remember When? 1935 — the largest salary earned by any American during this year of the Great Depression belongs to publisher William Randolph Hearst. Second is that of stage and screen star Mae West.

Christian Science election

An election meeting for the membership of the Christian Science Church of Carmel was held at the church on Nov. 15.

James Boyd of Del Mesa Carmel was elected to serve as First Reader for three years. Mrs. Frances Payne was elected to serve as Second Reader.

The two readers carry the main responsibility for the services of the branch church. Mrs. Payne will read from the Bible and Boyd from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy.

The primary duty of the readers is to read the Christian Science lesson-sermon on Sundays.

The Wednesday evening meeting conducted by the first reader includes a period when individual members of the congregation speak informally of experiences of Christian healing.

Of man and beast
A new addition to man's best friend

By ARABY COLTON

THEY SAY the dog is man's best friend.

But is he? Well, yes, and no. Not to deer, which dogs kill by the thousands every year. Not to the stock raiser, whose four-footed property is constantly threatened by dogs, both wild and domestic. Not to the helpless ducks, or chickens, or pet family goat in the suburban back yard pen, so regularly massacred by the neighbors' friendly dogs.

In New England, with its small farms and numerous villages, dogs have very nearly wiped out a once-prosperous sheep industry. In Sonoma County dogs caused one month last year, $9,000 worth of livestock damage. In Monterey County the ranchers fight an unending war with feral dogs, both those out for a night's fun with their friends, and the "pig dogs," left by hunters to fend for themselves, who must kill to survive.

Carmel Valley and the Cachagua area are not unlike New England in one respect. Domestic pets and livestock on small acreages are vulnerable to night-roaming or even day-roaming dogs, and, as the beleaguered owner well knows, poisons, or traps, or guns are not permissible in so populous an area.

However, the solution is here, though it comes from a long way off from the Old World. It's the European Guarding Dog.

For thousands of years, ever since he came west with the Mongols from central Asia, this dog has protected European sheep from predators and thieves.

He stands 36 inches and weighs up to 200 pounds. His shaggy, impenetrable coat, which insulates him from heat and cold, and protects him for predatorial teeth, makes him look like and unkempt sheep.

Unlike herding dogs, which are quick and responsive to the shepherd's commands, guarding dogs are passive, placid, and work on their own without supervision. Raised with sheep, often suckled on a ewe, these dogs develop an unbreakable social bond with their sheep. They are his family.

How does a large, slow dog guard? His mere presence, in most cases, does the job. An intruder brings him to his feet, from among his sheep. He places himself between the stranger and his flock and barks. If the warning is unheeded, and defense of his sheep is needed, the placid dog becomes a ferocious fighter.

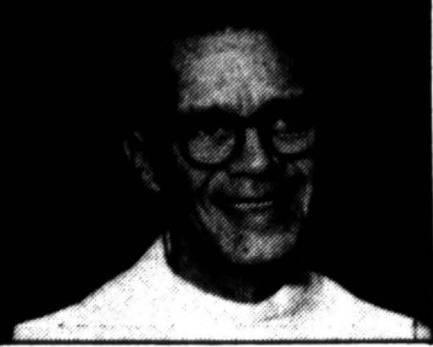

He dispenses with ritual signals or threats and moves with catlike quickness to seize the predator by the back. The intruder is killed, or at least given a vicious shaking. Rare is the dog, coyote, or human who can stand up to him.

Different areas in Europe and Asia Minor have developed individual breeds of guarding dogs which differ in temperament. The Anatolian Shepherd from Turkey, for instance, is comparatively aggressive. The Great Pyrenees, from the Pyrenees Mountains, is more mellow and more suited to family relationships.

The Great Pyrenees raised by Catherine De La Cruz, in Petaluma, have proven to be excellent guarding dogs and excellent family dogs. Cynthia Crane's "Shasta," of Catherine's breeding, reduced losses of sheep to dogs from 70 to zero in one year. As Cynthia says: "Since Shasta joined our family, the dogs just don't come around."

Although Western range conditions pose special new problems to the European Guarding Dog, sheep ranchers have become so enthusiastic about them that even the United States Wood Growers' Association has endorsed the experimental use of them. They may very well be the most effective predator control program yet.

CARMEL HIGH School teachers Jim Helgason (standing) and Dave Chaney will present a report on the use of this computer in special education classes when the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education meets Dec. 14. (M.G. photo.)

School trustees to go back to class for special lesson

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education will go back to school Dec. 14 for a special lesson on teaching techniques.

Trustees and visitors will become the "class" for a demonstration of techniques used in special education classrooms when the board meets at 7:30 p.m. in Room 2 at Carmel High School.

The special education report will include presentations on the use of a computer to determine job interests; a lesson on teaching appropriate social behavior; a demonstration of how teachers, principals and parents meet to determine a course of study for the student; and a videotape of activities in a classroom.

For the demonstrations, trustees and those in the audience will be divided into groups and may also participate in the programs, said Rich Hawkins, district director of pupil personnel services, curriculum and instruction.

Carmel High School teachers Jim Helgason and Dave Chaney will present a report on how a computer and disk program called "Quest" has helped special education students discover their vocational aptitudes.

Quest is a vocational computer program that was developed by the University of Oregon and distributed through a Richmond, Calif. company, Chaney told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

"We're going to tell the school board how the students use the computer to search for and find careers that fit into their abilities," Chaney said.

The first step in the program is for the students to complete a career aptitude worksheet that lists questions on areas of interest, plans for a college education and physical abilities.

The answers are then fed into the Apple II word processor and the student receives a print-out of all of the different kinds of careers available that match his personal interests and abilities.

The computer also tells students why a career is not listed.

"If a student wants to be, say a tour guide for example, he can type in 'tour guide, why not?' and then the career number. The computer will then tell him why," Chaney explained.

"Let's say someone wants to be something that requires a college education and the student put down in his form that he didn't want to go to college, the computer would tell him that's why the job was not listed," he continued.

INSTEAD OF the teacher telling them — who they don't listen to all of the time — the computer is telling them."

After the student decides on several future work possibilities, he must go to the school career center and find out more about the job. The student must also write a business letter to companies that provide the jobs and ask for more information, Chaney said.

The Quest program is only one of many different educational uses for the computer, Chaney explained.

The computer is used to teach spelling, reading and math.

Chaney has programmed into the computer a facsimile of the minimum proficiency test. He then has students take the sample test. Print-outs indicate whether the student could pass or if there are areas where he needs more work. State law requires all students to pass the minimum proficiency test before graduation.

Helgason agrees that the computer is a valuable educational tool for the special education students.

"One of the most beneficial things about the program is the flexibility it has to fill the competency requirements," he said. "Any exercise we do on the computer can be geared toward learning competency. It's a great learning tool."

Helgason uses the computer in a variety of ways, including a unique program incorporated into his resource geography class.

The students must map a trip on the computer which includes destination, what highways to travel and how many miles the journey will be.

Carmel man's song aired on television

JIM GREENAN, a freelance writer and retired Carmel real estate agent, may have written his ticket to Nashville fame one night last year when he

JIM GREENAN of Carmel heard the country and western song he composed last year played by the Hager Brothers on Hee Haw last week. The song, Cowboys (Cornbread and Chile), was Greenan's first country song.

"They're able to plan and map out a trip across the United States," he explained.

A different kind of program will be presented to trustees by Carmel River School special education teacher Nita Cain.

Ms. Cain will present a report on the daily routine of her class and a special project that uses sign language to help the developmentally handicapped communicate.

The Carmel River School program has seven students from four to nine years old.

"You work with these children just like every other child," Ms. Cain explained. "It's just that mostly everything is touched and felt. It's more sensory and it's just a little slower."

For some of the children with better motor skills, sign language is an effective communication tool, she said.

The report will also include an outline of the different daily activities in the classroom. In the morning, the older students are given instruction in "safety skills," such as learning how to cross the street.

"We take them out by the school and teach them how to cross the street. It's better on-site. They learn better than just explaining it to them in the classroom," Ms. Cain said.

All students receive instruction from the district speech therapist from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. followed by a period of physical education.

Another part of the program is a tutor project where other students visit and become "pals" with the special education youngsters.

developed writer's block while writing a polo story.

To battle the dreaded writer's syndrome, Greenan penned the lyrics to his first attempt at country and western music and entitled it, Cowboys (Cornbread and Chile).

On Saturday, his song was performed by the Hager Brothers on the syndicated television series Hee Haw.

And if the Hagers complete an album they are about to begin, Greenan said he's been told his song could be included.

Greenan said his inspiration for Cowboys came to him while listening to a country/western radio station late one night in Santa Barbara while trying to complete an article for Polo News.

His mind had come to a dead-end on the polo story but the music inspired a song. "Twenty minutes later, it was done," he said.

He showed his lyrics to Bruce Holms, a child prodigy on the piano who played at Carnegie Hall at age nine and who had a night club act in Santa Barbara.

Holms has composed more than 200 country/western songs, Greenan said.

By the following morning, Holms had finished writing the music for Greenan's song and recorded Cowboys in his home studio.

Greenan returned to Carmel and was informed last month the Hager Brothers were scheduled to perform his song on Hee Haw Saturday.

"I've been told it's extremely rare when a writer's first song is ever performed by name artists," Greenan said. "I've always listened to country music but never thought of writing music."

"I was very lucky."

It's called Nashville luck.

Greenan said he hopes that Nashville luck follows him to Hollywood, where he is peddling his next project, a screenplay of political intrigue.

Artisans give thanks at La Playa in Carmel

The fifth annual "Artisans Give Thanks to the Animals" Christmas show and sale held at La Playa last weekend was a success.

The opening preview on Friday evening offered wine and hors d'oeuvres and drew a crowd which was definitely in a buying mood.

The 30 artists and craftsmen who participated displayed their wares at tables and booths in various areas of La Playa, including the lobby and the main dining room.

Browsers and buyers were delighted with the large selection of items on display, which included jewelry, ceramics, weavings, sculpture, toys, leather work, pottery, batiks, quilting, enamel and numerous handmade dolls.

A new item in this year's show was hand-painted eggs, on display in the lobby. The eggs came in a variety of sizes, are extremely beautiful, and drew many admirers.

There was no admission charge Saturday or Sunday and a steady stream of people attended.

Proceeds from the show will benefit Friends of the Sea Otter, Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Cetacean Society and Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society.

LUSANA HUBBARD'S collection of handmade wool felts and pressed velour hats were part of the craft show at La Playa. Mrs. Hubbard (right) adjusted a hat for Sarah Voorhies.

CARMEL CHRISTMAS TREE LIGHTING DEC. 10

Candy canes, hot cider, the singing of Christmas carols — and the arrival of Santa Claus. It's all part of the annual Carmel Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony which will take place at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 10.

The beautiful old pine tree located in the center of Ocean Avenue at Junipero Street has been the official Carmel Christmas tree since around 1918. The sad news is that the tree is now dead and that this will be the last year it will be dressed in holiday finery. That's all the more reason to make this year's tree lighting ceremony a festive affair.

This year's ceremony will be sponsored by the Carmel Youth Center, Carmel Fire Department and Carmel Plaza.

The singing of Christmas carols is always a big favorite with the hundreds of locals and tourists who attend the ceremony. John Farr will lead the singing accompanied by Peggy Aitkenhead on the piano. Fritz Haas will be in charge of sound.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend will pull the switch to light the tree and Michael Meloney will be master of ceremonies for the program.

Santa Claus will be present to chat with the little people and pass out candy canes. After the ceremony, children can visit with Santa at the Youth Center located on the corner of Torres Street and Fourth Avenue.

The Carmel Fire Department is working on its annual food and toy drive so those who wish to help can do so by bringing a donation to the ceremony. The items can be dropped off at the Plaza during the ceremony, at the Youth Center after the ceremony or at the Fire Department, located on Sixth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets.

HEART ASSOCIATION WILL SPONSOR STUDENT RESEARCHERS

The Central Mission Trails Chapter of the American Heart Association has applications for the student research program. Applicants must be enrolled in a college or university and must have junior or senior status in the fall of 1983.

Students who are selected are assigned to leading research laboratories in California for a 10-week period during the summer to work under the direct supervision of experienced scientists.

Each student will receive a non-taxable grant of $1,000 for this period.

The deadline for requesting application packets is Dec. 17. Applications or more information may be obtained from the American Heart Association at 10 San Miguel Avenue, Salinas, 93901.

"MUD PEOPLE" CHRISTMAS SALE

The "Mud People" Pottery Co-op of Monterey Peninsula College will hold a pre-Christmas sale in the Community Center Building from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 15 and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 16.

On sale will be wheel-thrown, slab, and coil-built pieces. Some are stoneware and some are porcelain, but all are made by beginning to advanced students. Many of the items are suitable as Christmas gifts and all are reasonably priced.

For further information call the ceramics department, 646-4201.

CHAPEL PRESCHOOL CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

The Carmel Valley Chapel Preschool will hold a Christmas program at the school at 11 a.m. Dec. 15. The program will consist of traditional Christmas songs, plus some modern songs. Musicians will include Robert Moore on violin, Patty Walters on violin and guitar, Edward Petty on guitar and Shirley DeLisi on piano.

Admission is free and the public is welcome.

Carmel celebrates Christmas

The auditorium at Sunset Center was not as full as it should have been but the holiday spirit was high last Saturday afternoon as locals and visitors joined in the annual Carmel community Christmas celebration.

The hour long sing-along was led by Ann Welchner, who was backed by combined church choirs, including a children's choir.

Solos, some in other languages, were sung by various individuals. Jason Anderson's song "Do You Hear Someone?" won a $100 prize as the best original holiday song by a Monterey Peninsula resident. The song was sung during Saturday's festivities.

Jason, who attended the festivities with his wife Katharine and the couple's 20-month-old daughter Laura, is a 31-year-old native California. At age five he began 12 years of piano study under Charles Fulkerson and later attended Whitman College and Conservatory of Music.

He spent 10 years as a professional jazz musician, keyboard artist, singer, composer and arranger. He is the choirmaster and composer at Carmel Mission Basilica, and a music teacher with the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District.

After the musical program, volunteers from the community served coffee, hot cider and a variety of holiday cookies. Some of the holiday sweets were made and donated by individuals while others were donated by local bakeries.

Naturally, good old Santa Claus joined in the celebration. As a finish to their singing program, the children's choir sang a short song which asked why Santa hadn't yet arrived. That was the cue for the jolly old fellow to make his entrance and ho-ho-ho his way down the aisle to the stage to greet the children. He later joined the adults on the patio for cookies and cider.

MEMBERS OF the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services held a meeting at the Carmel Woman's Club on Dec. 3. During the festivities Miss Edith Rivett was presented a bouquet of roses by Don Hovland, executive director of Family Services Agency.

MPVS ladies climax year with party at Woman's Club

The ladies of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services climaxed an exceedingly busy year with a special meeting at the Carmel Woman's Club on Friday, Dec. 3.

Before the meeting, the ladies enjoyed coffee and cake. One special highlight was when Miss Edith Rivett, a 95-year-old member who continues to be active at the MPVS Thrift Shop after 20 years of service in the organization, was presented with a bouquet of long stemmed roses.

Checks were presented to representatives of the Family Service Agency and the Visiting Nurse Association. The funds were the proceeds from the group's annual sale held this year at the Monterey County Fairgrounds on Oct. 30.

Judith Herrmann, executive director of the Visiting Nurses Association, explained that the check will be used in a new program scheduled to start soon. The program will be called the "Community Health Information Service."

It will be a clearing house of information for anyone including doctors, hospitals, families or individuals needing information about sources and specifics of health services of all kinds. It will serve all age groups.

The Family Service Agency recently moved its offices to 1010 Cass St., Monterey and has several programs in need of funds.

JANET FAIRWEATHER admired one of the 30 trees at the Festival of the Trees sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. (Photos by Terri Lee Robbe.)

SHAKING HANDS in front of the Christmas tree purchased by attorney Michael A. Manlin and donated by him to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula were Milton C. Coburn (right) and Philip Gray. Coburn has helped the Hospice financially by donating funds from the Maurine Church Coburn Foundation.

Festival of the Trees tallies another smash holiday success

A winter wonderland of 30 beautifully decorated Christmas trees was the setting for the invitational opening of the 14th Annual Festival of the Trees at the Monterey Peninsula Fairground on Wednesday, Dec. 1. The event — which ran through Sunday, Dec. 5 — can be deemed nothing less than a smashing success.

The gala offered the perfect opportunity for the ladies to dress in holiday finery so silks, satins, black velvet and warm wraps were much in evidence.

The festival, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, got off to a good start with more than 300 people arriving to socialize, admire the trees, sip champagne and nibble on a variety of gourmet foods.

The handmade ornaments, created by museum volunteers who work year-round on the project, seem to be more beautiful each year. The trees are purchased by various local businesses with all proceeds going to benefit the museum.

One very beautiful tree decorated with angels created from lace doilies, clothes pins, yarn, fake fur and greeting cards was purchased by attorney Michael A. Manlin and donated to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Seen admiring the trees were Mr. and Mrs. Jay Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Raggett, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Calhoon, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kenaston, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Temple, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Dak, Betty Barron, Helen Spangenberg, Milt Coburn, Dr. and Mrs. John D'Atillio and Lee Early whose lovely wife, Artie, spent the evening dipping and serving the delicious punch.

Many of the guests spent time (and dollars) doing a bit of Christmas shopping in the Christmas Boutique and in the museum gift shop annex. Many of the handcrafted items were one-of-a-kind and were reasonably priced.

Mary Ann was nominated for the annual award last February, while she attended Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan as a junior. Of 7,000 American high school students nominated last year, only 850 were cited. Winners were selected on the basis of two original compositions submitted to the council.

School trustees to meet Dec. 14

Is there a way to ensure that parent-driven private vehicles are safe enough to use for student transportation?

That will be the question before the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 14 at Carmel High School.

Because of budget problems and the lack of district vehicles, parent volunteers often transport students to and from field trips and sporting events.

However, trustees Nov. 30 questioned whether there could be methods to determine that the vehicles are safe. They asked Superintendent William Rand to prepare a report for further discussion Dec. 14.

Parents, under current regulations, are asked to sign a form that specifies the car is in reasonably safe condition and has working safety belts, according to Supt. William Rand.

Rand is also scheduled to report to trustees that the district insurance policy includes accident coverage for parents who volunteer to drive the students.

Father Farrell's wisdom

If we dish it out ...

CARMEL ROTARY, LA PLAYA HOTEL

My mother had a friend, Mae Greenleaf, who was born and raised in San Francisco "south of the slot." She often spoke of family feuds and greed. She would say: "There is a law of retribution. The mills of God grind slow but exceedingly fine." If justice seemed long in coming she would add: "Thank God there is a final judgment at the end of time."

Recently I read about an Irish international soccer player, Liam Brady, who wrote a book about his athletic triumphs entitled, "So Far So Good."

In one chapter he referred to a London Daily Mirror sports writer with a venomous pen and a notoriously vicious style as "untrustworthy and heartless."

The journalist was supersensitive to attack. The biter was not going to be bitten, so he sued for libel in the high court. The jury decided that the sports writer was in fact untrustworthy and heartless. His lordship, the judge, awarded the Irish soccer player costs of more than 20,000 pounds. This would have pleased Mae Greenleaf.

Oh Lord, help us to learn this lesson: if we dish it out, may we be able to take it. If we live by the sword, let us be prepared to die by it. Amen.

A touch of Christmas magic on Carmel stage

TOYMAKER Cornelius van Bittenburn (Thomas R. Sanchez) touches up one of his magical creations (Allen Fremier) in Little

Angels' Rest, a heart-warming tale about runaway orphans and magic dolls, playing Thursday through Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at the Indoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel.

The Staff Players Repertory Company brings Christmas magic to Carmel's Indoor Forest Theater Thursday, Dec. 9 with Little Angels' Rest, a heart-warming tale about runaway orphans.

The orphans seek refuge from the harsh life of a girls' orphanage by running away to a toy shop where dolls come alive and dreams come true. Thomas R. Sanchez plays the toy-maker, Cornelius Bittenburn, who endows his creations with more than meets the eye at first glance.

Gwenith Hovick, is the cruel and shrewd Grammonika Gouge, who runs the orphanage with an iron hand, often leaving the children to starvation and ill-health. Alicia O'Neill is Sully Orpslatt, the drunken cook, who menaces the orphans with threats.

Howard Hinkley and Phil Pratt play Mr. Hollowboy and Counselor Upchurch, who praise the fine work of Grammonika, letting the two runaway girls fend for themselves. Appearing as the runaways are Ashley Foster and Adria Estribou as Jibbet and Susanne Carr and Anna Brown as Lissie.

Little Angels' Rest will be performed Thursday through Sunday, Dec. 9-12 and 16-19. The Indoor Forest Theater is at Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. For further information and reservations, phone 624-1531.

Christmas music:

Singers to perform at the Mission

The Camerata Singers will present a concert of Christmas music Sunday, Dec. 19 at 8 p.m. at the Carmel Mission Basilica.

The program will include Quatre Motets Pour Le Temps De Noel, by Francis Poulenc and Johann Sebastian Bach's Magnificat, with interpolations for Christmas day.

Dr. Vahe Aslanian formed the Camerata Singers in 1981 to study and perform a wide variety of vocal literature. The original "Camerata", from whom they derive their name and inspiration, were a group of Florentine intellectuals, musicians and poets who met in the "camera di musica" of the palazzo of Count Giovanni Bardi in the early 1600s to discuss and produce new forms of music, drama, and art as opera.

The original group was composed of 16 singers, however, for the 1982-83 season the Camerata Singers have been enlarged to 25 members. These selected singers work with Dr. Aslanian in his own "camera di musica" in San Benancio Canyon studying vocal music, both solo and in various ensembles. Their dedication to vocal solo is manifested in their backgrounds as singers on the concert, opera, and musical theater stages, as well as, in churches, in the United States and throughout the world.

The Camerata Singers are composed of sopranos, mezzo-sopranos, altos, tenors and basses. Sopranos are: Betty Addison, Janice Griffin, Kathleen Guyette, Eleanor Wylde and Ruth Solomon. Mezzo-sopranos are: Barbara Metz Lorraine Pedrazzoli, Carol Starks, Carolyn Stewart, Erica Swanson. Altos include: Brenda King Almeida, Myrna Benson, Susan A. Conner, Marah Taylor and Naomi Tuff. Tenors consist of: Pat DuVal, Alfred H. Harris, Paul Tuff, Kenneth Villegas and Jim Wurz. Basses are John Cline, Alan J. Gilbert, Avon Gillespie, Joseph G. Griffith and Dale Victorine.

Dr. Aslanian, is professor-emeritus at Hartnell College in Salinas and was music director/conductor of the Hartnell-Community Chorus and consultant for the Hartnell College Conservatory of Music, which he founded in 1974.

Since 1956, Dr. Aslanian has been engaged in research and editing of the music of the early California missions, as well as, choral music of the Renaissance and Baroque periods. His transcriptions and editions of the choral music of Antonio Vivaldi and Leonardo Leo, particularly, have established him as an expert in the field of 18th Century Italian Baroque choral music.

Tickets for the concert are $5 for adults, $3 for students and seniors. If available, single tickets may be purchased at the door. The Carmel Mission Basilica is off Highway 1 south of Carmel. For further information, phone 372-4400.

ALAN GILBERT, a bass soloist, will perform in concert Sunday, Dec. 19 at the Carmel Mission Basilica with the Camerata Singers. Camerata will also sing Sunday, Dec. 12 at 3 p.m. at the San Juan Bautista Mission.

Monastery to present Spanish music concert

The lilting strains of early California music will be heard Sunday, Dec. 12 at 5:30 p.m. at the Carmelite Monastery, when a group of singers under the direction of Dr. Keith Rubrecht present a concert of Spanish music. Guy Horn and his musical group, Trio Beijaflor, will perform instrumental selections.

The concert will be followed at 6 p.m. by the annual Spanish Mass honoring Our Lady of Guadalupe, Patroness of the Americas. The candlelight Mass will be celebrated by Fr. Juan Oronoz and sung by the cloistered nuns and the choir.

There will be no public morning Mass at the Monastery Sunday, Dec. 12. The Monastery is at Highway 1 south. For further information, phone 624-3043.

CARMELITE PAT DuVal will sing with the Camerata Singers Sunday, Dec. 19 at the Carmel Mission Basilica. DuVal is a deputy with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

ELEANOR WYLDE OF Carmel and Joe Griffith of Carmel Valley will be two featured soloists with the Camerata Singers who will perform in concert Sunday, Dec. 19.

Film review:A powerful film about Jewish life

By ANNE TELFORD

The Chosen. With Rod Steiger, Maximilian Schell and Robby Benson. Based on the novel by Chaim Potok. Directed by Jeremy Paul Kagan. A 20th Century Fox release.

The Chosen is a gem of a film. Based on the award-winning novel by Chaim Potok, the story revolves around two Jewish boys in New York at the end of World War II — Danny Saunders, the son of a powerful Hasidic rabbi and Reuven Malter, the son of a reform professor and writer on Jewish affairs.

Robbie Benson is suprisingly good as Danny Saunders, a tall stern Hasidic Jew from a long line of rabbis who has been raised in silence by his father. His mannerisms and vocal inflections are right and it was easy to forget he was the kid who starred in all those schmaltzy teenage romance films.

Barry Miller plays Reuven, a street-wise kid who is bright and guards his emotions well. He and Danny become friends only after a baseball accident. He tells Danny, "You play baseball like Babe Ruth and talk like you're from outer space." It is hard at first for the two boys to reconcile the differences in their upbringing and the religious ideologies by which they live.

Rod Steiger turns in an amazing performance as Reb Saunders, the inconoclastic Hasidic rabbi who refuses to be moved from his strict observance of the ritual laws. He commands the screen whenever he plays a scene and imbues his role with an almost hypnotic power.

The film devotes itself to presenting the struggle between assimilated Jews and sectarian ones, between Jews who work for and believe in the creation of a Jewish state, and the Hasidim who believe that a Jewish homeland can only be founded by the Messiah, and must be a religious state.

Both sides are represented fairly in the film. Maximilian Schell turns in a solid performance as the thoughtful scholar who after the horrors of the war works toward the creation of Israel. One particularly memorable scene has Danny and Reuven in Danny's bedroom, with light coming in through the blinds illuminating their faces in striated patterns as they discuss the "Jewish state."

As an example of the strange duality of life, Reuven decides to become a rabbi and Danny chooses to become a psychologist. He is ultimately reconciled with his stern father, who through the wisdom and pain of silence taught his son that the mind without a heart is nothing.

The Chosen is a beautiful and thought-provoking film, a film about choices and their consequences, and ultimately about love.

Ford-Lemmon star in film

The Great American Western Film Festival continues its series Tuesday, Dec. 14 with the presentation of Cowboy, at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center, Carmel.

The film is based on Frank Harris' autobiography, My Reminiscences as a Cowboy.

Cowboy is an honest film that presents a relentless portrait of the non-glamour of cowboy life, and exudes rare flashes of earthy "in character" humor.

The interplay between

Glenn Ford and Jack Lemmon is interesting. It's hard to describe exactly what Ford does to bring off a largely unsympathetic role so well; and Lemmon is refreshingly cast against type.

Also included in the cast are Anna Kashfi, Brian Donlevy, Dick York, Richard Jaeckel, and King Donovan.

Sunset Center is at Ninth and San Carlos, Carmel. Tickets are $2 and will be available at the box office. For further information, phone 624-3996.

Das Boot: Back by popular demand for a limited engagement. Starring Jurgen Prochnow, Herbert Gronemeyer and Klaus Wennemann. Based on Lothar Gunther-Buchheim's semi-autobiographical novel, Wolfgang Petersen's film follows a daring patrol by U-96, one of Admiral Doenitz's famed U-boats, from its send-off party in the occupied French port of New Rochelle to its climatic return months later. Das Boot is more than just a war film. It is a portrayal of men meeting propaganda and myth and finding the hollow truth behind the words "honor" and "strength." At the Carmel Village Theater.

The Empire Strikes Back: Luke Skywalker, Hans Solo, Princess Leia and the evil Darth Vader are back and better than ever in George Lukas' sequel to Star Wars. Klaus Kinski, Herzog's perennial lead actor stars in this tale of vision and madness. Claudia Cardinale co-stars. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

Superman II: Stars Christopher Reeve as the famous comic book hero and Margo Kidder as love-struck reporter Lois Lane. Terrance Stamp leads a band of super-villains who are intent on destroying the world, or at least New York City. Superman returns to his home planet Krypton and deals with the insidious villain Lex Luthor played by Gene Hackman. Better than the original. At the State Three Cinemas.

The Last Unicorn: An animated film starring the talents of Alan Arkin, Jeff Bridges, Mia Farrow, Christopher Lee and Keenan Wynne. Distributed by Jensen Farley Pictures. At the Center Cinemas.

The Man From Snowy River: Kirk Douglas, Jack Thompson and Tim Burlinson star in this adventure drama about a young man growing up in the mountains of Australia's Great Divide. George Miller directed this drama, which is based on a classic poem and wilderness folklore. At the Cinema 70.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: The cult classic where two teenagers, Brad and Janet, meet Dr. Frankfurter, a Transylvanian transvestite. Fri. and Sat. midnight show. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

The Secret of N.I.M.H.: Starring the voices of Dom DeLuise, Peter Strauss, John Carradine and Hermione Baddeley. Based on the novel Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of NIMH, by Robert C. O'Brien, this action fantasy is in the classical style of animation. The story concerns a widowed mouse who seeks the help of some mysterious rats to save her family. This is the first feature film from Don Bluth Productions since he and 16 others left Walt Disney Studios more than three years ago. At the Center Cinemas.

Tex: Stars Matt Dillon, Jim Metzler and Ben Johnson as Cole Collins. The struggles and conflicts of two teenage brothers growing up in the southwest without parental guidance is the main focus of Tex, a coming-of-age film from Walt Disney Productions. Based on the best-selling novel by S.E. Hinton, America's leading young adult author, Tex is a realistic account of an adolescent's maturation, relationships and taking of responsibility. Directed by Tim Hunter, screenplay by Hunter and Charlie Haas. At the Dream Theater.

Time Bandits: A fantasy about a group of dwarves who have a map which enables them to find "holes in time." They drop in on a 20th century boy and lead him on a series of exciting adventures. At the Hill Theater.

The Toy: Imagine Jackie Gleason as a rich and high-handed southern tycoon and Richard Pryor as the flat-broke, would-be journalist who gets an amazing offer — to become a plaything for Gleason's spoiled young son. The situation is ripe for comedy. In a rare departure for Pryor, the film is rated PG. At the Regency Theater.

Werner Herzog's award-winning film The Mystery of Kaspar Hauser and the classic Ninotchka, starring Greta Garbo will be offered by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society this week as part of its fall schedule.

The Mystery of Kaspar Hauser, won the Grand Jury Prize at the 1975 Cannes Film Festival. Directed by Werner Herzog, leading director of "the new German cinema," the film is based on a real event that occurred in 1820s Germany, when a young man barely above the animal level and unable to speak, read or write, mysteriously appeared in a German town.

The mystery deepens after "Kaspar Hauser" is taken in by the townspeople. "Unforgettable, intensely provocative drama," said critic William Wolf of Cue magazine.

The Mystery of Kaspar Hauser will screen at 8:15 p.m., Friday and Saturday, Dec. 10-11.

Ernst Lubitsch's 1939 film Ninotchka, starred Greta Garbo in her first comedy as a cold and repressed Russian agent, on a diplomatic mission to Paris, who tries not to give in to a more liberated lifestyle and a romance with playboy Melvyn Douglas.

"A truly fun film and Garbo is great," said the London Times.

Ninotchka will screen at 8:15 p.m., Wednesday, Dec. 15.

Both films will be shown in the Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. General admission is $3.50, $2.75 for students, seniors and military and $2 for Film Society members and children.

Sunset Views

A special thank you

By RICHARD TYLER

ONE OF THE qualities that can exist in the city of Carmel because of its village environment is a community spirit that involves those who live here as well as those who have their businesses here.

It is this very spirit that makes a celebration such as the holiday celebration that was held at Sunset Center this past Saturday possible.

Started six years ago with the thought of bringing together the entire community in a neighborly gesture of fellowship, the celebration has continued to grow through the years. Many people came forward offering their time and talents. In a resolution passed by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Council, it was stated that this celebration is open to all the communities to attend and join in neighborly fellowship. The warmth and joy that spread throughout the center on this day is well worth the efforts put forth. Still, I want to thank everyone who participated and joined to make this truly a community enjoyment.

These include the Carmel Community and Cultural Commission, which gave of their time and always are enthusiastic about community activities; the Holiday in Carmel Committee chaired by Mrs. Suzanne DeClerque and so ably assisted by Mrs. Bernard Anderson. The following people and establishments contributed to making this day such a great success:

Rev. James Clark Brown of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula; Dick Lewitzke who makes our Santa Claus such a lovable one each year; Jane Strauch, Tobin Armbrust, Jean Canada, Bob Prestley, Sandy Griffith, Christie Moore, Ken Horn, Becky Klevan, Eileen Bradley, Elizabeth English, Steven Saenz, Kimberly Schwartz, Noreen Dickerhoof, Jennifer, Guy and Elizabeth Truscott whose voices filled the theater in solo.

A special thanks must go to the many members of the choir made up of singers from the All Saints' Episcopal Church, Church of the Wayfarer, St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, Carmel Presbyterian Church, Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, Carmel Mission Basilica; Catherine Meehan and Donna Monaghan who accompanied all the music performed; Mrs. Marguerite Evans, Mrs. Eleanor Laiolo, Ken White, Mrs. Margaret Arnold, Mrs. Harriet Shanner, Mrs. Dorrie Hammond, Mrs. Virginia Gore who were such fine hostesses for the afternoon; Dan Yurkovich and the Carmel Unified School District; River School, Bay School, Lyceum and Tulareitos School and particularly Miss Tilney and Mrs. Stanford who set up the art work in the foyer of the theater; Mrs. Lorene Shields who inspired the decorations for the sweets tables; Joan de Stefano and the Girl Scouts for their yearly creative decorations for the Christmas tree; the Host Lions for supplying the funds for the candies passed out by Santa Claus to the many children attending; Kiwanis Club who yearly have supplied such a beautiful tree; and the Carmel Rotary Club who pay for the music used in the programming; the following banks who have helped fund miscellaneous items: Bank of America, Bank of Carmel and Crocker National Bank; Neilsen's Market and Bruno's Market and the Royal Danish Bakery, Albertson's (Monte Mart), Wishart's Bakery, Safeway, Hector de Smet's Bakery and Sylvia's Danish Pastry Shop for making the table so bountiful, and many thanks to the residents for their baking arts that enhanced the aromas as well as the taste buds all afternoon.

Thanks to Mrs. Lou Langley and Mrs. Wendy Banks who put forth such efforts each year to help make the afternoon a happy one; a warm thank you to our gracious Mayor Charlotte Townsend, who took the time from her busy schedule to welcome the community and stayed to talk to the children and her many friends; to Ann Welchner, who every year produces a choir and a performance that seems to be unbeatable, for her untiring efforts to insure an inspiring experience; and, of course, to the Pine Cone for their community involvement throughout the year.

Happy Holidays to all and to those who were not able to join us this year, let us plan together for the next celebration.

Backgammon

Stick to the rule

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 5-4 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it? (Note that you have a man on the bar.)

Of course you must begin by entering the man from the bar. Then you have a choice. You may continue with the man you have just brought in, hitting a blot on Black's 9-point; or you can come in on Black's 5-point and move over from his 1-point, thus making an anchor on the Black 5-point.

As a rule, you can hardly ever go wrong in the early stages of a game by making your opponent's 5-point, and in this case you have no reason to depart from the rule.

If you had two men on your own bar point, giving you a four-point prime across the bar, you might prefer to hit Black's blot on his 9-point. Even if Black had your bar point (as in the diagram) but you had your 4-point or 3-point, you might prefer to hit the blot. You might then hope to keep Black out or keep him behind a prime if he returns to the board.

In the actual position, you gain practically nothing by hitting Black since he can easily come in and should easily get out to your bar point. Settle for the long-lasting advantage of holding an advanced point in your opponent's home board.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

A variety of media at PG Art Center

Three new exhibits are currently on display at the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove.

A retrospective show of art created through the Crosby/Art Center sponsored Children's Art Class will be hung in the Elmarie H. Dyke Memorial Gallery (Galley 19). Artist/teacher Joyce Lair has had approximately 200 students ages eight through 12 years of age, study and create artwork in the past several years. The work ranges widely in technique, application and media to include: watercolor, frottage, collage, printing with pastel, ink, crayon, paint, glue, paper, etc.

The Art Center childrens program will soon expand to include a comprehensive textile program.

An art show for the handicapped titled Art Unlimited '83 will be exhibited in the Main Gallery.

Artists and craftspersons from over 20 agencies will participate with their art and handwork. The exhibit is co-sponsored by the New Monterey Neighborhood Center, Handicapped Activities Unlimited and the Art Center. Eighty percent of the proceeds will benefit the participants.

Much of the work in this exhibit has been done by serious year round disabled artists. Crafts include ceramics, sculpture and a variety of handworks along with paintings and graphics.

An exhibit of photographs by Ken Ruth will be shown in the newly renovated Photography Gallery. Ruth's photographs are included in the permanent collections of the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris and the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

Color prints by Marcia DeVoe will be exhibited in the hall gallery. DeVoe is the documentary photographer for the Cooper/Molera Adobe Restoration in Monterey. Her photographs document the people involved in the restoration and the actual process itself.

Winston Swift Boyer

Carmel gallery opens 'European Portfolio'

Photography West Gallery will give an opening night reception Friday, Dec. 10 from 5-7 p.m. at the gallery honoring Winston Swift Boyer and his new exhibition European Portfolio. The public is invited to attend.

Boyer, a resident of Carmel, has attracted national attention as a color photographer, though he is still in his 20s. With an academic training in cinematography and painting, he brings some of the sweeping composition of the former discipline to his color photography.

He is grounded in the tradition of European art, which he loves and appreciates. Boyer has been published in Camera 35 and Picture Magazine, and was recently chosen as one of the few photographers considered "Master Printers" in the current Time-Life book on color photography. He was a finalist in Ilford's 1981 Cibachrome National Awards, which had 20,000 entries. Boyer is able to coax both subtleties and richness from his cibachrome prints, a material known for its saturation and brilliance.

Through Photography West, Boyer has recently published a dye transfer portfolio of selected photographs of Europe, where he spent three years earning his living as a photographer for continental and American sports publications. In addition, other landscape, architectural and still life photographs of Boyer's will be on display through February 2.

Photography West Gallery is at the southeast corner of Dolores and Ocean Avenue, Carmel. For further information, phone 625-1587.

DEN HELDER, a cibachrome color print by Winston Swift Boyer, is one of many works by the Carmel photographer to be on display Saturday, Dec. 11 at Photography West Gallery, southeast corner of Dolores and Ocean Avenue, Carmel. There will be an opening night reception for Boyer Friday, Dec. 10 from 5-7 p.m. at the gallery. The public is invited to attend.

Keep your tree
fresh and safe

As the holiday season approaches, the Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department has turned its attention to Christmas trees.

"Fresh Christmas trees, of all common varieties, present no significant fire hazard as long as they remain fresh," according to Sidney Reade, public education officer for the department.

A fresh tree can lose its natural moisture shortly after it has been cut, Reade said. Trees purchased from a tree lot usually have been cut weeks in advance and have lost a significant amount of moisture before they are sold. "These trees should be flame-proofed," she said.

"A fresh cut tree can be kept from drying out by keeping the tree trunk submerged in water immediately after it is cut but the trunk must remain in water while being used as a Christmas tree. If this is not possible, flame-proofing should be applied."

She said Christmas trees "are without question the most flammable item to be found in a home" when they are thoroughly dry.

"Once ignited, the speed and intensity of burning is extreme," she said. "A dry tree will appear to literally explode and be totally consumed in a matter of seconds."

To flame-proof trees, a sufficient amount of flame retardant chemical approved by the state fire marshal should be applied to the surface of the tree by the coating method.

For more information on acceptable flame retardants, contact the Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department at 624-5907.

Unique jester heads featured in exhibit

Merlin's Christmas Gallery in The Barnyard shopping center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel, will hold an open house Tuesday, Dec. 14 from 3-9 p.m. for Carmel born artist, Lynda M. Jasper-Vogel.

Lynda has become nationally known as the creator of limited edition jester heads. Her work is usually shown only at art galleries in southern California or outside the state. However, because of her local attachments, she will have a special showing of Sir Cedric's Good Heads through Jan. 6 at Merlin's Christmas Gallery.

Lynda's father, Cedric Jasper, casts all Sir Cedric's heads in his Monterey workshop. They are then taken to Lynda's studio in Marin County where they are transformed into either one-of-a-kind heads or one in a very limited series.

The heads often take the shape of wizards, witches, jesters, fairies, cavaliers, clowns, Shakespearean or Dickensian characters. They are painstakingly painted, wigged, hatted and garbed.

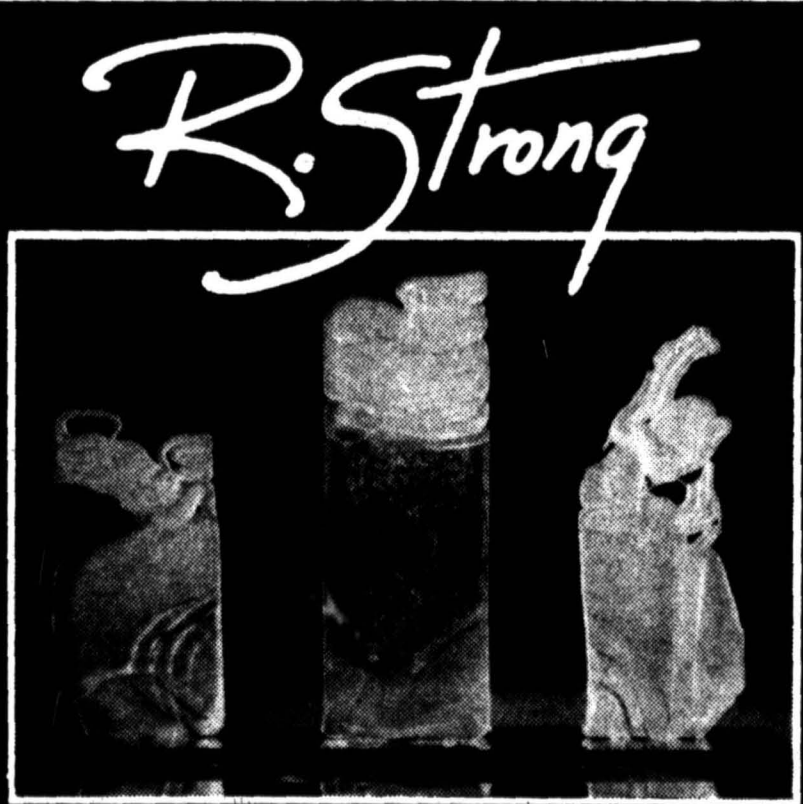

Sir Cedric's Good Heads takes the "jester stick" to a higher level of sophistication, in terms of variety and detail. To achieve this, strict attention is paid to the quality of both materials and craftsmanship. No synthetics are used where it can be avoided; beads are of glass, metal or wood; yarns are hand-spun and dyed; antique materials are used over new; and each costume is hand sewn and assembled with care.

Lynda will be at the gallery in person from 7-9 p.m. to discuss her work. An open house will be held from 3-9 p.m. Refreshments will be served. Open to the public. For further information, phone 624-8886.

Maternal health meeting offered

The Maternal, Child and Adolescent Health Advisory Board of Monterey County will hold a meeting Monday, Dec. 13 at 8 p.m. in the County Health Department Building, 1200 Agujito Road, Monterey.

Parents, teachers, health care providers and interested individuals are invited to attend. For further information, phone 1-757-1061, ext. 212.
